A Resume of the Day's Operations—Casualties.

From Our Special Correspondent.

Sunday Evening, March 26, 1865.

The late engagement along the front of the left wing of this army resolves itself, on due examination, into a movement of the most perfect success, and we hold in our hands the substantial fruits of the victory. We have inflicted upon the enemy an irreparable loss, both in men and position, and they have been taught one of the sternest lessons of the siege. It has been proved beyond cavil, even in the most rebellious heart, that our hold on the City of Petersburgh is a firm one, and one not easily shaken off; and there can be no doubt that the entire scheme of operations along our front, from the Appomattox to Hatcher's Run, has resulted in manifesting to the rebel Generals the utter futility of any attempt upon their part to break through our lines and compel us to throw up the siege.

It appears that at midnight of Friday, the whole of Gen. Anderson's corps, consisting of Heth's, Gordon's and Bushrod Johnson's divisions, were suddenly roused from sleep and ordered under arms. The men were told that they were going to meet Sherman, and that the command would take the cars in Petersburgh. This corps has for some time been lying in position along our left, on Hatcher's Run.

Moving speedily down from their right to the City of Petersburgh, they were suddenly brought up in the dark to their front line, and the charge that took place on Fort Steadman was then arranged. Unfortunately for the rebels the divisions of Gens. Heth and Johnson were behind time, and the attack was delayed to await their arrival. Daylight making its appearance the enemy became desperate, and the charge was made by Gordon's division alone.

LEE'S PLANS.

It was expected that Gordon would be able to seize Fort Steadman and the two flanking forts to the right and left, Haskell and McIlvery. Gaining these, Gordon would be able, it was thought, to hold the line until he received the assistance of the two tardy divisions; and when the entire corps had reached the interior of our lines, they would sweep up the reverse of our works, and by that means open a path for the rest of Lee's army.

It is easy to see what would have been the subsequent tactics of Gen. Lee had he succeeded in this extraordinary and, I must say, foolhardy programme. Cutting the main bulk of the Army of the Potomac from all communication with its base, and beyond all hope of aid from the Army of the James, Gen. Lee would undoubtedly have opened a vigorous flank attack and aimed at forcing our troops into the tangled woods on Hatcher's Run, and by that means endeavor to crush the army and render it of no possible use to its sister organization across the river.

This was a very bold scheme, and had it proved successful the result would have been most disastrous. Once gaining a decisive hold upon the important position covered by Forts Steadman, Haskell and McIlvery, there is no telling how far the daring of the rebel General or the desperate courage of the soldiers would have carried the main bulk of the enemy.

Fortunately the attack, though at first partially successful, proved to be of too weak a character, and at too late an hour, for anything like positive or permanent success. Gordon's division did not even succeed in the task set down for them. After gaining Fort Steadman and such of the garrison who were still asleep, the rebels did not do anything like what was cut out for them.

The brave resistance of the garrison of Fort Haskell, (assisted by such of the men camped outside who succeeded in gaining an entrance before the bridge was destroyed,) prevented them from making any concerted attack or charge upon that most important work.

The terrible and galling musketry fire, kept constantly upon their ranks from the fort, at length compelled them to fall back to an old line of breastworks of ours to reform. Here was a predicament. Isolated from their main command, and cut off entirely from any safe or practical retreat, the division found themselves compelled to fight it out on the "last-ditch" principle.

It is gratifying to know that the conduct of our troops was so meritorious, and that the corps holding that portion of our lines were able to wrest the captured position from the enemy, and inflict so severe a loss upon them.

MOVEMENTS OF THE ARMY.

While the engagement on our right was in hot and bloody progress, the entire army was ordered out under arms, ready for any fresh demonstration on the part of the enemy. Portions of the Fifth Corps were immediately set in motion for the lines of the Ninth Corps. Gen. Ayres brought his command up to the Jerusalem plank road, where he was halted, as the fort had been by that time retaken by the Third Division of the Ninth Corps, (Gen. Hartrauft.) Gen. Crawford, following Ayres, only reached Parke's Station with his division, and then was temporarily assigned to the Sixth Corps as its special reserve. Gen. Ayres remained with the Ninth, and Gen. Griffin reported to Gen. Humphreys.

Shortly after it was ascertained that our line had been reëstablished on our right, and the enemy defeated, Gen. Humphrey expressed a wish to advance and attack the enemy on his immediate front, near Hatcher's Run, as it was believed that the force then in position along the run was very small.

It was a great pity, to say the least, that this movement was not determined upon at once, for the result proved that the enemy at that time were indeed very weak on that front. But it is but fair to say that the situation up to noon was anything but decided. The enemy might repeat their attack, and in that event we would require all of our available force to hurl upon their advancing columns. Viewing the situation from the stand point occupied by Gen. Meade, he could not otherwise than act cautiously.

In my opinion the flags of truce sent out by the rebels for their dead, placed the probability of renewed attack on the part of the enemy in a decided negative, and at that moment Gen. Humphreys received permission to make the attack he meditated.

The movement in the Second Corps commenced at about 11 o'clock by divisions, and the First and Third Divisions took the advance. On the front of Gen. Miles' (First) Division the attack was begun by Col. Scott, commanding the First Brigade, who went forward with 200 picked men from the Sixty-first New-York, and attacked with spirit. Just as the intrepid little party were moving down on the rebel pickets, Col. Scott discovered that the rebels were relieving their line of advanced posts.

Judging it impolitic to enter the lists with a double picket, the Colonel held his command in hand, and patiently awaited the retirement of the old picket. No sooner had the relieved guard fallen back from the line, than our men charged upon and captured the entire line. The brigade then moved up in support, and the Irish Brigade (Second) also dashed impetuously forward and completed the capture of almost all of the rebel picket line in front of Gen. Miles.

On inquiry among the prisoners it was found that they belonged to Johnson's division, and had only just reached that portion of their line, having been brought up from the scene of the enemy's charge on our right, on the double quick, in evident anticipation of just such a move as was then in progress.

Finding that the enemy had been reinforced, no further attempt was then made by the division to seize any more of their line than we had already taken. Holding with determination the strong and very defensible line of picket-pits already in our hands, Gen. Miles awaited developments and further orders.

Simultaneously with the forward movement of Gen. Miles' division, Gen. Mott's (Third) Division moved out in front of their works, and pushed boldly forward until they covered our line of pickets. Throwing out two regiments of infantry on either flank—the Twentieth Indiana and the Seventy-third New-York on the right, and the Eleventh New-Jersey and the One Hundred and Twentieth New-York on the left—Gen. Mott moved his command up to within striking distance of the enemy's line.

The flanking columns penetrated the advanced line of rebel pickets, and captured 132 prisoners. Charging with great gallantry, these regiments seized the intrenched line of works.

Repeating the movement to the right and left, they succeeded in gaining 165 more prisoners, and also buried 28 dead, bringing off the field 22 rebel wounded. This closed that stage of the operations of Gen. Mott.

The division of Gen. Hays was held as a reserve to Gen. Mott, and maintained an interior position on his left and rear. Portions of the Third and Fourth Brigades, of Gen. Mile's division, and Griffin's division, of Gen. Warren's (Fifth) Corps, also acted as reserve. Griffin's command formed the grand reserve, but the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania and Sixteenth Michigan, of that division, pushed forward as skirmishers, and were hotly engaged for a time.

A DIVERSION.

Gen. Smyth's brigade, (Third,) of the Second (Hays) Division, of the Second Corps, performed signal and important service, in creating a diversion on the left flank of Gen. Mott's command.

Lieut.-Col. S. A. Moore, with 500 men, from the Fourth Connecticut Heavy Artillery, Twelfth New-Jersey, Sixty-ninth and One Hundred and Sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers, was sent out on to the Dabney-mill road, for the purpose of finding out the exact position of the enemy on Hatcher's Run. Meanwhile Gen. Smyth held the remainder of his brigade within supporting distance.

Col. Moore moved rapidly on toward the Dabney road with his gallant little command, and pushing through the woods, passed the W. W. Armstrong house, near Armstrong mill, skirted the run, and eventually struck the run above where it diverges to the right. Charging across Hatcher's Run at this point, regardless of the fact that the water was almost breast high, and the run itself all filled with a confused mass of fallen timber, the brave little party kept on until they encountered the rebel picket line just beyond, in a series of entrenched rifle-pits.

These pits they charged with a dash, and captured nearly all of the pickets in them. After this success, the party pushed on for some distance, and then established a picket line, which was held by Gen. Smyth's brigade until after dark, when they were ordered in.

Lieut.-Col. Geo. W. Lupont, Seventh Michigan Volunteers, acted as guide to the brigade of Gen. Smyth, on their diversive movement, and remained with the General during the entire movement.

The number of skirmishers thus successfully captured by Col. Moore amounted to over 70 men. During the progress of the movement, Col. Moore had six killed and thirty-three wounded. Lieut. J. B. Bradley, of the Fourteenth Connecticut, was seriously wounded in the arm.

Gen. Hays ordered the movement to act as a diversion, and to relieve Gen. Mott's division, which was being threatened. The entire affair was highly creditable and eminently successful.

Among the incidents of this gallant little manœuvre, was the fact that several of the men succeeded in penetrating the woods for some distance, and brought in some more prisoners. Corporal Hiram Fox, of the Fourteenth Connecticut, captured five prisoners and an officer's sword, he being almost the first man to cross the run.

THE SIXTH CORPS.

The Sixth Corps also brought up all their available force, and took the initiative in making an attack upon the rebel position in their front. The country in front of the left of the Sixth Corps being all open, and the entire line of the enemy in plain view, this portion of the fight was a very interesting one.

Holding Wheaton's (First) Division in reserve behind the main works, Gen. Wright moved out his two remaining divisions in direct attack. Crossing the open field in splendid style, and regardless of all efforts of the enemy to stop them, the corps rushed forward and also seized the greater portion of the continuous line of intrenchments held by the rebels as their main picket line, capturing a large number of the men in them.

We had thus full and complete possession of some three miles of rebel line of heavily intrenched—almost continuously so—picket pits. They in fact assume the form of huge rifle pits, with outlying curtains upon which to deploy the reserve of each post.

The importance of this line to the enemy, as well as ourselves, was immense, for its possession by our army would compel the rebels to confine their picket line to a very short distance from their main works, and pen them up to a great extent. Besides the fact that our outer line would be so far advanced as to render it impossible for any surprise or attack to be made with any degree of success.

It was easy to see at an early hour that the hottest part of the day's fighting was yet to come, and every preparation was made upon our part to meet any aggressive movement of the enemy. Calm and reliant our troops maintained a bold and determined front.

THE REBEL ATTACK.

At 2:30 the rebel attack commenced along our entire left, and it was a very severe one while it lasted. Coming from behind their works and forming in line of battle, the enemy made a series of charges upon the new advanced position taken up by our troops.

On Gen. Miles' front they made four separate and distinct charges, and were each successive time repulsed with terrible slaughter. The First and Second Brigades of that division sustained the brunt of the fight, and both commands behaved admirably. The Irish Brigade, (Second,) commanded by Col. Nugent, lost pretty severely, and sustained their high reputation throughout the entire battle.

The First Brigade, (Col. Scott,) also did good and efficient service in repulsing the charges made upon their lines by the rebels. The Third and Fourth Brigades acted in reserve, and supported their sister brigades in admirable order, but their loss was comparatively slight.

On Gen. Mott's front two or three charges were made, and at one time the enemy succeeded in uncovering the left flank of the division, partially doubling it up, but they were soon driven back and the position speedily and easily retaken.

During the whole action this division behaved with commendable gallantry, and the results of the day do them great credit. This division is all that remains of the famous old Third Corps. Reduced down to three brigades, the corps now does most efficient service in the Second Corps, under Gen. Mott.

During the attack, Gen. Mott's division captured the battle-flag of the Fifty-ninth Alabama, killing the Major of the regiment and mortally wounding the Lieutenant-Colonel, (Floy,) who was shot by one of our men, with the flag of his regiment in his hands.

This Lieut.-Col. Floy charged upon Gen. Mott's right flank with his own and another Alabama regiment, and was terribly repulsed. The greater part of the command were taken prisoners. Lieut.-Col. Floy subsequently died, I am informed, but do not vouch for the report, although I know the Surgeon said that he could not live many hours.

OUR CAPTURES.

Gen. Mott's division also captured and wounded several rebel officers. Major Isaac T. Hamilton, of the One Hundred and Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, was seriously injured on the spine by a limb from a tree struck from its trunk by a solid shot. This division captured over 300 prisoners.

The First Division also captured a large number of prisoners, although it was impossible to learn the number, as many had been sent direct to army headquarters. Among the officers wounded in this division was Lieut. H. A. Hickox, Aid-de-Camp on Col. Scott's Staff, of the First Brigade. Lieut.-Col. W. De Lacy, One Hundred and Sixty-fourth New-York, was wounded severely through the shoulder in advancing the skirmish line in the early part of the day.

The attack of the enemy on the Sixth Corps was the most severe of all, for the enemy had full range upon that corps, and the scene of the battle realized the generally received idea of a battle.

As the rebels formed and advanced they were met by a constant fusilade from the infantry, accompanied by a heavy and persistent artillery fire of solid shot. The attack was made with determination, and the Sixth Corps—or, rather the Second and Third Divisions of that corps—was forced to fall back slowly for a short distance.

Fearing that the situation of his command might become precarious, Gen. Wright sent for Gen. Crawford's division, of the Fifth Corps, to come up and support him. As that Division came up from the Weldon Road, Gen. Wright threw the First Division to the front, and the entire corps then made a headlong and impetuous charge upon the enemy, about 6 o'clock P. M., and drove them pell-mell before their resistless onslaught, regaining such portions of the debatable ground as had slipped from their grasp.

During this part of the engagement, the firing along the entire line of our left, was very heavy and continuous. The rapid and heavy cannonading, mingled with the awful crash of musketry and the loud and repeated cheers of the men, gave the eye and ear of the spectator a splendid scene.

CLOSE OF THE DAY.

Thus closed the day. We had maintained our hold on the advanced positions already seized, and our line of battle remained in complete possession of the entire line at dusk. There the army remained, out on the new line, until about 1 o'clock this morning, when the main part of the commands returned to camp, leaving a strong picket force in charge of the line.

The loss of the Sixth Corps was not so heavy as one would suppose from the character of their operations. This command also secured a large number of prisoners. The First Maine suffered heavily, as also the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers. Lieut.-Col. A. W. Dwight, of the One Hundred and Twenty-second New-York, was killed.

Owing to the extremely diversified character of the entire scheme of operations during the whole of yesterday, it was very difficult to forward to the Times anything more than a mere outline of the movements observable throughout this wing of the army. To-day I finish a full and detailed description of what really took place, as well as a full and reliable list of casualties among officers in the Second and Sixth Corps. I also append the official statement of losses in those corps, obtained from the different brigades. It may, therefore, be relied upon as correct.

THE RESULTS.

Viewing the whole field of operations in the retrospect, the battle or advance of our army on Hatcher's Run resolves itself into a complete and signal success, inasmuch as we have caused the enemy a very heavy loss in killed, wounded and missing. We have also secured a most advantageous position for our outer lines, and have planted our pickets almost within easy musket range of the main line of the rebel works.

Our lines, as they at present stand, are in the highest degree advantageous to us, and annoying to the enemy. In front of the Sixth Corps the advanced line of pickets are nearly a quarter of a mile nearer the rebel lines than they were before the engagement, thence toward the left the new ground gradually widens and pushes on until it finds itself over a mile further from our old line of pickets, and consequently of a far greater value to our army. On the left of the Second Corps the pickets of that corps extend almost to the Boydton-plank Road, and the entire new line is one of great natural strength and availability.

Owing to the difficulty and immense labor requisite to move and erect the camps on the newly secured ground, no attempt was made by our troops to throw up any heavy defenses. The front line is fully capable of being successfully held, and the pickets are so admirably arranged and supported, that it will prove a very difficult task for the enemy to dislodge us from our foothold.

TO-DAY'S OPERATIONS.

Very few men could be seen, to-day, in the enemy's works, but their battle flags were in full view from our interior lines. They are throwing up very strong lines of picket posts behind the slight line they at present hold, gradually falling back to the posts as the pits are finished.

In some parts of the line in front of Gen. Mott's division of the Second Corps, the enemy have established themselves in three lines of breastworks, and it was thought at one time that the rebels might attempt to force the position of Gen. Mott. It is almost needless to say that proper and ample preparations were made against any such probable attempt.

During the greater part of to-day the army was held in readiness for anything that may occur. The Fifth Corps is now acting as a Corps d' Reserve, and as usual in such cases the command of Gen. Warren was under orders to march at any moment. The corps is now, however, quietly lying in camp, and the rigid state of preparation is somewhat relaxed.

As I write the pickets are commencing a constant fusilade, and no doubt they will continue the monotonous concert all night. Down on our right cannonading can be faintly discerned by the listening ear, but it is easy to tell that nothing important will be the result.

THE FIFTH CORPS.

I have omitted to mention that the Fifth Corps was held in reserve all day. Ayres' division remained all day massed near the Jerusalem plank road, and there being no further use for it, the command returned to camp for the night.

Crawford's division performed some most singular and diverse movements. Early in the morning it was sent to the Ninth Corps, with the Second Division, halted on the way, and diverted toward the Sixth Corps lines. While on their way the General received orders to mass near Fort Duchesne, on the Halifax road, and prepare for a review. They were soon after reviewed by the President, accompanied by Gen. Grant and Gen. Meade, and a numerous party of ladies. Hardly had the review terminated, and the distinguished party departed than Gen. Wright sent down for the command to support his corps while he made the closing charge of the day.

The division of Gen. Griffin remained all day with the Second Corps, and a portion of the command was slightly engaged, and the Lieutenant-Colonel and Major of the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers were wounded. The total loss of the division was five killed and thirty-five wounded.

STATEMENT OF LOSSES—SECOND CORPS.

First Division—Killed, 30; wounded, 293; missing, 57. Total, 370.
Second Division—Killed, 6; wounded, 32. Total, 39.
Third Division—Killed, 19; wounded, 150; missing, 120. Total, 289.

SIXTH CORPS.

First Division—Killed, 3; wounded, 52. Total, 55.
Second Division—Killed, 26; wounded, 220; missing, 24. Total, 270.
Third Division—Killed, 8; wounded, 65; missing, 1. Total, 74.

FIFTH CORPS.

Griffin's Division—Killed, 5; wounded, 35. Total, 40.

The losses of the enemy must have been severe, for they suffered terribly in killed and wounded. During the repeated charges that they made our murderous fire caused great slaughter among the charging columns. Officers from the picket line report that the cries of the wounded all of last night was heartrending. But it was impossible to assist them in consequence of the frequent firing of the rebel pickets and videttes.

This morning the dead and wounded were brought off the field, sometimes with a tacit understanding that no firing would be indulged in by either side, and at other portions of the line flags of truce were allowed for the purpose. It is estimated that the rebel loss on our left alone, must reach very near 2,000, while we have some 1,500 prisoners in our hands. You will see by the statement that our losses, as set forth above, are only 1,167 all told, of whom 200 are missing. It was believed that the majority of these latter would ultimately make their appearance, as they may have become lost in the woods. Several had already reported while I was collecting the report of losses.

Taking it as a whole the day's proceedings were most disastrous to the rebel arms. On the right their loss was frightful for the number engaged, and the proportion of killed and wounded was unusually large. Under the flag of truce, yesterday afternoon, we turned over to them fully 200 dead, found within our lines, besides a large number who were mowed down by the heavy discharges of case and solid shot along the front of our line.

We have now in our hands nearly 4,000 prisoners, and several hundred wounded, so that when one considers the general average of such engagements, we are led to believe that the enemy must have suffered to the extent of almost 7,000 in killed, wounded, and missing, besides losing an important position for their pickets, and giving up to us a large amount of very important ground. The day has also proved in the most signal manner the weakness of the rebel army in front of Petersburgh, both as regards numbers and position.

I take pleasure in publishing the following congratulatory order of Brig.-Gen. Hartrauft, of the Third Division of the Ninth Corps. It must be remembered that this division never saw a fight before, and were for the first time on Saturday, face to face with the enemy. The division is composed of the Two Hundredth, Two Hundred and Eighth, Two Hundred and Ninth, Two Hundred and Fifth, Two Hundred and Seventh, and Two Hundred and Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and numbers something over five thousand. The order needs no introduction, for it speaks for itself:

Headquarters Third Division Ninth Army Corps,
March 25, 1865.

General Orders, No. 12.—With feelings of pride and satisfaction the Brigadier-General commanding tenders his congratulations to the officers and men of his command for their gallant and heroic conduct in the brilliant and triumphant achievement of to-day, which resulted in the recapture of Fort Steadman and the entire line, together with battle-flags, a large number of prisoners and small arms.

You have won a name and reputation of which veterans might feel proud, and have proved yourselves worthy of being the associates of the brave soldiers of the old Ninth Corps, and the General commanding hopes that this, your first engagement and signal victory, will nerve and stimulate you for the performance of future deeds of gallantry.

To the wounded, and to the families of those who have so nobly fallen in defence of their country, the General commanding tenders his most heartfelt sympathies.

By command of Brig.-Gen. J. F. HARTRAUFT.
Jno. D. Bertolette, Assistant Adjutant-General.

Monday, March 27—8 A. M.

During the greater part of last night heavy picket firing continued in front of the Sixth Corps. Several times the troops were roused from their beds by the volleys. We have not had such heavy picket firing along our front for some time, and it causes the unaccustomed ear to notice it the more readily. Such alertness on the part of the enemy proves that our present hold is anything but agreeable.

Along the front of the Second Corps, picket firing likewise prevailed to a considerable extent, but nothing near so heavy as that in front of the Sixth Corps. Cannonading was also indulged in upon our right, but to no great extent.

An erroneous idea prevailed through most of the army last night regarding the movements of the Fifth Corps. At this moment it is firmly believed by many outside of the Fifth Corps, that Gen. Warren's command has been on the march ever since 3 P. M., yesterday. I need scarcely say that not a man moved except to strengthen our pickets.

Our present position is in every way tenable, and we are now only watching the enemy's movements, so as to be ready for any fresh movement on his part. Like the cat in the fable, this army fixes its attention upon its prey, and I believe the long-enduring patience of the gallant Army of the Potomac will soon be amply rewarded. GEO. F. WILLIAMS.

The Battle of Saturday—Complete Union Victory—The Rebels Fall to Plundering.

Headquarters of the Army of the Potomac,
Tuesday, March 28.

The engagement here yesterday was, without doubt, the most important and successful for the Union arms that has taken place since our arrival in front of Petersburgh. Not only was the enemy met and defeated at every point, but the result demonstrated the fact that they have lost heart in their cause, and that large numbers are ready and anxious to lay down their arms and give up the struggle.

After they had succeeded in getting possession of Fort Steadman, they at once fell to plundering the baggage in the tents, and all that their officers could do would not induce them to desist. Those who remained in line fought with nothing like the enthusiasm they exhibited last Summer, and many laid down their arms at the first opportunity of reaching the rear. On witnessing this, the rebel officers determined to return to their own lines as rapidly as possible, and, urging their men over the works, managed to get a large portion of the assaulting column back in safety. Hundreds, however, ran and hid in the bomb-proofs and waited there for our men to come and take them prisoners. The number brought in by the Ninth Corps was reported correctly yesterday at 1,800.

The loss in this corps is not far from 600, the official figures not being ascertained.

After the fighting ceased at this point of the line, it was thought that the attack might have been made to cover a more important one on the left, and, consequently, the entire army was put under arms to be ready for any emergency.

Gen. Humphrey was ordered to make a reconnoissance in front of his line, in order to develope the enemy's strength and ascertain their movements.

This was done shortly before noon, and the picket line was either driven in or captured, for a considerable distance. Our men continued to advance, and part of the division reached and took possession of a second line of slight works; but the rebels soon after charged the latter, in line of battle, and forced our men back to the line first taken. This was principally caused by the enfilading fire from two batteries, which they were enabled to throw along this advanced position. From this time until 4 P. M., the firing was not very severe, the enemy having retired to their works, leaving a strong picket line to hold their pits.

At this hour the signal to fall in was sounded along the rebel line, and soon after a heavy column appeared, and, forming in line of battle, advanced in a charge on Gen. Miles' division; but they were gallantly received by the heroes of this division, who soon drove them back in disorder, with heavy loss. Twice they repeated the attempt to break through the line, and, failing in this, they endeavored to turn the right flank; but Gen. Miles was as ready to receive them here as at other points, and they finally fell back and disappeared, leaving their dead and many wounded on the field.

The roar of musketry on this ground was as severe and continuous, for two or three hours, as ever heard, and was not surpassed even by that heard at the Wilderness.

Gen. Miles and his officers and men, particularly the Irish Brigade, receive the highest praise for their gallant behavior on this occasion.

The Third Division, under Gen. Mott, held the centre of the line, and repulsed each attack of the enemy with spirit, although the contest here was no so desperate as in front of the First Division.

The One Hundred and Twentieth New-York Regiment, and Eleventh New-Jersey, are highly spoken of for their conduct under Col. Schoonover.

The Second Division held the extreme left of the line toward Hatcher's Run, the brigade commanded by Gen. Smyth only being engaged. They advanced at the same time with the rest of the line, and took part of the enemy's works, with a number of prisoners.

The losses in the Second Corps, as near as can be ascertained, are about 450, with probably 100 missing.

Among the casualties are the following:

Col. Biles, of the Ninety-ninth Pennsylvania Infantry—wounded.

Lieut.-Col. Andrews, of the Twentieth Indiana—wounded.

Maj. Hamilton, One Hundred and Tenth Pennsylvania—wounded.

Capt. Stewart, of the One Hundred and Tenth Pennsylvania—killed.

The engagement between the Sixth Corps and the enemy was not so severe as at other parts of the line, where the Second and Ninth Corps fought.

Here also the object of the attack was to feel the enemy, and ascertain if the works were occupied in force.

Some of the troops finally reached the rebel pickets, and took about five hundred and forty-seven prisoners, driving the remainder back to the main works.

The enemy's batteries were very active and did a good deal of mischief.

Firing was kept up till dark without any attempt on their part to regain the lost ground.

The casualties in the Sixth Corps were thirty-five officers and four hundred and fourteen men, among whom are the following:

Killed—Sergt. Michael Halloran, 6th Maryland; H. Henry, 67th Pennsylvania; Jas. Easter, 67th Pennsylvania; Jacob Schmidt, 110th Pennsylvania; Michael Dwyar, 110th Pennsylvania; A. Griffith, 110th Pennsylvania; M. Marlow, 122d Ohio; J. Armstrong, 110th Pennsylvania; Capt. J. W. Meilinger, 93d Pennsylvania; Lieut.-Col. A. W. Dwight, 122d New-York; Capt. S. Oakley, 77th New-York Battalion; Lieut. S. Pierce, 77th New-York.

Wounded—Lieut. S. Risen, 93d Pennsylvania; Lieut. F. Phillippi, 93d Pennsylvania; Lieut. J. H. Parchmer, 93d Pennsylvania; Capt. A. C. Douglass, 139th Pennsylvania; Adjt. D. L. Crawford, 139th Pennsylvania; Lieut.-Col. J. G. Pau, 139th Pennsylvania; Maj. J. Fritch, 93d Pennsylvania; Lieut.-Col. D. C. Killear, 93d Pennsylvania; Lieut. J. E. McClusky, 139th Pennsylvania; Capt. P. Bricher, 93d Pennsylvania; Capt. W. Crosley, 1st Maine; Lieut. F. Hunter, 1st Maine; Lieut. A. A. Dwinelle, 1st Maine; Lieut. J. W. Helpley, 1st Maine; Col. C. A. Williken, (slight) 43d New-York; Capt. J. Goldthwait, 1st Maine; Capt. J. C. Rample, 139th Pennsylvania; Lieut. J. Boggs, 139th Pennsylvania.

The hospitals of the Sixth Corps being insufficient to accommodate all the wounded, Col. Spaulding, of the Fiftieth New-York Engineers, and his officers, not only tendered the use of their handsome church and residences to the Surgeons, but rendered valuable aid in caring for the sufferers, making coffee for them, and doing all in their power to make them comfortable.

The number of prisoners in our hands as the result of the day's operations is 2,571 enlisted men and 88 officers, beside about 150 wounded in our hospitals.

An order is being issued to the army, congratulating the officers and men on the splendid victory achieved over the enemies of the country, and thanking them for their behavior on the occasion.

To-day a good deal of picket-firing has been kept up along the line, but without any casualties as far as known.

About twenty-five deserters came in this morning, bringing, however, no news.

TUESDAY, March 28, P. M.

On the meeting of the Stock Exchange Board this morning the decease of Mr. JACOB LITTLE, one of its oldest members, and for a great many years its most active and conspicuous operator, was announced by Mr. WASHINGTON R. VERMILYE. Mr. LITTLE died at his residence on Union Square, at 7 o'clock this morning, after an illness which had confined him to his house only a few weeks, though his health had been rapidly breaking down since November last. His age we understood to be 68 years, of which comparatively long life he had spent over 45 years in Wall-street, nearly the whole period as a member of the Stock Exchange Board. The foundation of his early success was laid as an active and popular Money and Bullion Broker in Wall-street, and he added largely to his fortune, in the five or six years from the great bank revulsion of 1837 to about 1842-43, by his operations in Uncurrent Bank Notes and in the Southern Exchanges with New Orleans, Mobile, &c. After that he identified himself more particularly with the Stock Exchange, where his gigantic operations and eventful career made his name a conspicuous mark in the varied speculations of Wall-street for nearly twenty years. Of late, he had given over the business of speculating on a large scale, after having made and lost several fortunes, through the vicissitudes of which he was ever the same cheerful and upright broker; liberal to the last degree to his colleagues of the Exchange when in difficulty or misfortune, and never asking to compound for less than a hundred cents on the dollar, when in temporary trouble himself.

The market for Government Stocks at the Board and on Wall-street was at firm rates, and the demand better than for several days. The Railway Stocks opened with some degree of steadiness, and several of the Western Roads were higher, and New-York Central active at an advance of 1@1½ ℘ cent. on last evening's sales. But after the First Board broke up the market gave way on nearly everything except Governments, and a renewed bearish or selling spirit came over both the New-York and Western Railways at a difference in some cases of 3@4 ℘ cent. from the morning sales.

At 4 o'clock the following quotations were made as compared with Monday afternoon. The Railways continue depressed. There was a calm in the Gold-Room, and but few transactions, at 154@153¾ ℘ cent.:

The First National Bank subscribed, to-day, for $565,000 of the 7-30 Popular Loan. The second series of this Loan, having a year longer to run, is now before the public, as will be seen from Mr. COOKE's authorized announcement in another place. Subscribers will receive the interest in advance to the 15th June next, and thereafter half-yearly, on 15th December and 15th June, until 1868, when the Notes will be convertible into 5-20 Gold-bearing Stock.

A difficulty occurred in the Gold-Room this afternoon, on the question of taking a default against a Broker for the non-delivery of Gold within a given hour. The receiving Broker demanded to have the Gold brought into the Room after 2:15 P. M., and thereupon the other party demanded to have the Gold paid for exclusively in Greenbacks, instead of Bank Checks, before 3 o'clock. As he subsequently furnished the Gold himself, this formality was also complied with, and here the transaction ended, though not without causing much excitement and a fiery speech or two in and around this famous arena of Gold gambling.

Until the foregoing occurrence, the market for Gold was unusually quiet, the sales ranging 154@153¾@154⅛@154¼ ℘ cent., and it was subsequently dull, closing about the same as on Monday afternoon. Bills on London, for the Boston steamers, were 109@109½ ℘ cent. for Gold, on a moderate business. The market for Money works easier, at 7 ℘ cent., and subscriptions were actively received at some of the National Banks for the Popular 7-30 ℘ cent. Loan, and large purchases made of the Funded United States Stocks on out-of-town orders. This process followed the first days of panic last week, and absorbed a considerable amount of the Country Bank balances in this city.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

We give this morning all except the merely narrative portion of the rebel Gen. Hood's long report of his conduct while in command of the Army of the Tennessee from July 18, 1864, to Jan. 23, 1865, at which time he was relieved. Hood makes an elaborate attempt to show that the army was nearly ruined when he took it from Joe Johnston, and shows—or tries to show—that he never had the means of making headway against the superior forces of the Union commanders.

Dispatches from Newbern give further particulars of Sherman's late movements, and intimate that his army is quiet at present, enjoying a few days' rest. Our men were warmly welcomed by the citizens of Goldsboro. That city will be the base for the present. Quartermaster-Gen. Meigs had arrived at Morehead City, at which place all needful supplies were coming in by sea in vast abundance. The rebels burned 1,000 bales of cotton just before leaving Goldsboro.

The rebel force, headed by Ratcliff, made a dash at Morganza a short time ago, captured seven pickets, and ambuscaded a pursuing force of cavalry. A smart fight ensued, in which we lost one killed and several wounded. On the 16th Gen. McKean and Ratcliff agreed upon a ten days' armistice, to allow the latter to hunt down the guerrillas who have been attacking the Mississippi steamers.

One of the eleven vessels reported destroyed by the rebel pirate Shenandoah, between Cape Good Hope and Australia, was the barque Delphine, Capt. Nichols, which left London Oct. 10 for Akyab. She was probably in ballast. The Delphine was 698 tons, built at Bangor Me., in 1861, and was owned in that city.

The President on Saturday had a distant view of the rebel forces before our lines at Petersburgh. While going to witness a review with Gen. Grant, he stopped at a fort within eye-shot of the extreme front, and from its parapet took a survey of the field. At one point in his excursion, Mr. Lincoln was within six miles of Richmond.

Simeon Horsely, who has gained some notoriety by his operation as leader or commander of a small body of men in Meade, Breckinridge, and adjoining counties, Kentucky, reported a few days ago at the office of the Provost-Marshal-General, in Louisville, and signified a desire to take the oath of allegiance.

The rebels are reported in large force about Alexandria, La., and engaged in strengthening Fort DeRussey. They have been making wholesale seizures of property belonging to citizens. Among their victims was Mr. Monfort Wells, who was robbed of 160 hhds. of sugar.

An enrollment has just been made in Chicago, and it appears there are 24,021 males there between eighteen and forty-five years of age without exemptions.

The whole number of officers who have served in the war from Connecticut is 1,932, of which New-Haven has furnished the largest number, 273, Hartford 218, and Norwhich 116.

The notorious guerrilla Hedge, who killed the guerrilla Defoster, was captured by our scouts near Garretsville, Ky., on Wednesday. He is severely wounded.

The period for raising new organizations in Pennsylvania has been extended to April 15, but this does not postpone or interfere with the draft.

GENERAL NEWS.

The correspondent of the London Star writes from Rome, under date of March 10: "I wrote you last week that Gen. McClellan had arrived here; he had not come then, though invitations had been given out for a party for Sunday a week ago to meet him. He arrived last Sunday. An American wag says that the reason of his delay was, that he could not make up his mind whether to come to Rome or to go to Sorrento first, and that finally he only decided to come this way when the coachman asked him at Naples which station he should drive to.

In Lasalle County, Illinois, a little while ago, two returned soldiers were walking out one evening with their intended brides, when they were attacked by a gang of rowdies who knocked down, beat and robbed the men, and dragged the girls off to a by place, robbed them of their watches and rings, threatened death if they resisted, and then violated them. Two of the fellows were caught, and have been sentenced to ten years each in the penitentiary. The girls have married their soldier lovers.

The recent freshet carried away the bridge connecting the village of Jamestown and Frewsburgh, in Chautauqua County, N. Y., the home of Gov. Fenton. The news reached Albany by telegraph the same night. In less than twenty-four hours a bill was framed, passed by both Houses, signed by the Governor, and transmitted by telegraph back to Jamestown, authorizing the construction of a new bridge.

Recent advices from the Saskatchewan country represent mining prospects as being highly encouraging. In the fall the miners there made on an average about $8 or $9 a day, some making as high as $16 to $18 a day. They speak hopefully of the prospects, but seem to be looking out eagerly for the arrival of free traders with goods.

About two years and a half ago, Col. John H. George sued the City of Concord, N. H., for the payment of a debt in gold, but the Supreme Court of the State has just decided that John must take his pay in greenbacks. Hon. R. J. Walker denies the statement made in the Montreal Gazette, that he visited Canada for the purpose of assisting an annexation movement with $100,000,000 of Federal money. He says this is his fifth visit to Canada within a few years, and it called for no such animadversion.

LOCAL NEWS.

A lady named Mary Texido, residing in the upper part of the city, recovered a verdict yesterday in the Supreme Court, circuit, of $2,500, against the Second-avenue Railroad Company, for injuries sustained in March last while she was attempting to alight from one of the cars of the company.

The Union Ferry Company are about to erect iron ferry houses on the Brooklyn side, similar to those in New-York.

At the Live Stock markets this week there has been but a limited supply of most kinds animals. The various railroads have not yet fully recovered from the recent distructive freshets, so that most of the live stock reported back last week, has been unable to get to this market. Prices, particularly of beef cattle, contrary to the general belief, have again reached the exorbitant rates of last Winter, but at the close of the market yesterday, these high rates had begun to give way to more reasonable prices, as the detained cattle commenced to come in more freely. Prices of bullocks have been about as follows: Extra, 25c.@26c. ₩ lb.; good, 21c.@24c.; common, 18c.@20c.; poor, 15c.@17c.; very poor, 14c.@15c. Cows and calves are about as last week. Sheep and live hogs are selling a trifle lower.

Gold was dull, yesterday, at 154@154¼ ₩ cent., about the same as on Monday night. The Railways broke down in the afternoon. The Government Stocks were firm through the day, and largely taken upon out-of-town orders. Money easy at 7 ₩ cent.

Produce and merchandise were in rather more demand yesterday, and the leading articles were quoted firmer. Freights were quiet.

The Military Spirit in Richmond.—All the accounts, official and non-official, from our army in front of Petersburgh, agree that Lee's veterans showed in the fight of Saturday, an utter lack of sustained energy. Their dash resolved itself into something like a momentary spasm. And when that was over, their spirits, energy and confidence were gone. The brave but misguided fellows confessed as much as this themselves. Lee's best and bravest troops have lost confidence; and Gordon, their temporary leader, can only hurl impotent curses at their nervelessness. The military spirit of the South is mainly embodied to-day in the few lying journalists that still keep blazing away upon half sheets of brown paper, at the prospect of Yankee subjugation. These fellows are doing the most noisy part of the fighting, and they are all as brave as sheep.

Has the Last Great Battle of the War been Fought?

In spite of the desperate struggle of Lee to regain the fading prestige of his Virginia veterans, by that frantic assault of Saturday upon Grant's lines, the opinion begins to prevail, among careful thinkers, that the last great battle of the war is already recorded.

The idea, we know, has prevailed that Lee would at last stake the fortunes of the Confederacy upon some mighty, desperate Waterloo, and would have it perish, if perish it must, in a blaze of glory. But Lee, whatever else may be said of him, is not without sense or feeling. We have no right to assume that he will much longer persist in sacrificing the lives of thousands of his men for a chance that has no existence, or that he will any the more do so for any barren sentiment. This would make him a mere butcher. But what chance has he? If he gives his final battle soon, it must be by throwing himself once more upon Grant's intrenchments, which he knows now, if he did not on Friday last, would be sheer destruction. If he waits before giving it, he will have to face not only Grant, but Sherman, which would only redouble the certainty of his being overwhelmed. If he evacuates Richmond to grapple with Sherman, before the latter comes up, he will find Grant close upon his heels, and will only put himself between the upper and nether millstone. His past conduct evinces that these dilemmas weigh upon him with their full force. Month after month he allowed to pass without any attempt either to move from Richmond or to drive Grant away from it. He dared neither to attack, nor to reduce his strength by sending reinforcements to check Sherman and Sheridan. He remained motionless while his difficulties were all the while thickening, while his chances for effective work were all the while growing less. He did this too in spite of the constant decrease of his effective strength by scores and hundreds of desertions daily, without any fresh accessions whatever, and in spite of increasing difficulties in procuring supplies. All this certainly does not look much like preparing for some supreme final conflict.

Perhaps it may be said that his inaction was occasioned by an expectation of legislation that would benefit him—particularly the authorizing of the conversion of slaves into soldiers. But why should he have delayed till beyond the time when such legislation could be of use? Can any man in his senses believe that stolid slaves can be drilled and disciplined up to the mark of effective soldiership within the brief interval that will elapse before Richmond is hemmed in by the united forces of Grant, Sherman and Sheridan? The rebel Congress could do but little at best, and that little was delayed simply because of a lack of faith that it would prove of any value. It is hard to suppose that Lee could have rested his decisive action on any such slender and doubtful considerations. It is easy to believe that he did nothing up to Saturday last, simply because he saw no chance of success, until he was deceived by Grant's apparent weakening of his lines.

Why should Lee again court an inevitable defeat? Certainly the carrying of fresh mourning into thousands of Southern families, with nothing but fresh discomfiture to show for it, would add nothing to his personal prestige. It would only stain his memory with new drops of bitterness. He cannot hope for better terms from our Government when prostrate on the battle-field than by a previous surrender. To spare the effusion of blood must be the strongest of all motives upon our Government to be as liberal and lenient as possible. Of course an unconditional submission must be had from Lee, whether it costs blood or not. The Government cannot degrade itself by compounding with treason. But who doubts that a missive from Lee, at any time, frankly declaring that the odds opposed to him were too great to be withstood, that he shrank from useless slaughter and would yield to humanity as well as necessity, would, on the instant, awaken in the Government and in the Northern people a most generous spirit, and that a submission thus made would be followed by a clemency far exceeding that which would come after a bloody victory gained over a raging and desperate foe? It will be impossible to impute such an act to fear, or to any other dishonorable motive. Gen. Lee has sacrificed too much to the Confederacy to allow any doubt of his disposition to serve it, so long as any chance is left it.

If Gen. Lee is to go into a general battle at all, he can have no object in delaying. Every day, as we have said, only puts him to a yet greater disadvantage. But if he is to surrender, delay is natural. It must take place under circumstances in which the whole South must see that reason left him no alternative. If it is to occur, we cannot expect it until he is completely beleagured by our armies either in Richmond, or some other position. Weeks must yet elapse before this complete hemming in can be consummated; and more time yet, perhaps, before his supplies would run so short as to compel him to take the final step. There is no reason to suppose that were Lee once surrounded, Grant would adopt any different line of action from that which he carried out with such success at Vicksburgh. He will not needlessly waste life by assaulting intrenchments which would be sure to be his after a little time without a struggle, through the want of supplies behind them. Neither the Government nor the country would expect this; nor would his own love for his soldiers, who have breasted the battle so often with him, allow it. Nor is it probable that the process of hemming in will involve much fighting. The concentration of the great armies will give them such strength as to enable them to secure, without much difficulty, all the position needed to establish an impenetrable cordon.

The probabilities are, then, that there will hereafter be no battle of any great magnitude, such as that at Gettysburgh or those in the Wilderness. We may look for occasional collisions of detached columns, but hardly for a general all-embracing engagement. The blood that will be shed, we may well believe, will be but a small measure—only a rill where once was a torrent.

Resumption of the Draft To-day.

In view of the fact that the Government for some time has had pressing need for men, its forbearance in the matter of enforcing the draft in this city has been remarkable. Further indulgence and delay, from the present aspect of recruiting, would simply be folly of the most unjustifiable sort. The men must be forthcoming at once, and as the ten days' trial of the machinery improvised by the various Ward organizations for hastening enlistments has in many instances resulted in nothing more tangible than fair promises, the Assistant Provost-Marshal-General, Maj. Dodge, has felt constrained to order the wheel in motion to-day in the Fifth and Ninth Districts, where recruiting since the the temporary suspension has been the tardiest. After the announcement of this decision yesterday afternoon, there were some mutterings of indignation on the part of that unreasoning and ignorant class who brought disgrace upon the city when the draft was attempted in 1863. To show how groundless is this dissatisfaction, we will give a few reasons which to all rightly-constituted minds, should mitigate the terrors of the conscription, if they do not dissipate them entirely:

1. The State Bounty Bill, yesterday perfected by the Legislature, provides for a bounty of $250 to every drafted man.

2. As if with special reference to the case of a drafted man, while the law permits no further local bounties to be paid to volunteers or substitutes, it says nothing to prevent the county from paying any required additional bounty to drafted men; while Maj. Dodge's orders permit them to use this bounty in procuring substitutes during a considerable period.

3. It is everywhere conceded that the term of service can by no possibility be as long or as dangerous as under any previous draft.

With these mitigating facts borne steadily in mind, and remembering also the lenient spirit which has marked the course of the Government in its dealings with the city throughout this vexed matter, it would be unreasonable in the extreme to withhold a hearty acquiescence, now that longer forbearance is impossible and resistance would be vain.

From Fayetteville to Goldsboro.—The connected story of Sherman's progress from Fayetteville to Goldsboro, which we publish to-day, reduces to an intelligible form the disjointed reports of the fighting which attended his advance. Two battles proper, and only two, were fought on the march. Hardee's Charleston and Savannah troops made a stand at Moore's Cross Roads, a point about half way between Fayetteville and Bentonsville. The resistance offered here was of such a nature that for part of two successive days, (the 16th and 17th,) the cavalry under Kilpatrick and a portion of the Twentieth Corps were engaged in dislodging the rebels from a position of considerable strength. But unless we misjudge the situation, this apparently heavy task was rendered heavier by something much resembling a blunder in the execution of a cavalry flanking movement—which was turned into a temporary repulse of our troops. The fight which ensued two days later, at Bentonsville, has already been sufficiently described. As soon as Johnston discovered that Sherman's real objective point was Goldsboro, he hurried forward the army of observation which he had posted half way between that place and Raleigh, to Bentonsville. The temporary repulse of the advance division of the Fourteenth—followed by the advance of the entire corps, and the precipitate retreat of Johnston's braves, were all the results reached by that General's strategy, and the road was thenceforth clear to Goldsboro.

The President on the Battle-Field.—The brave men of the Ninth, Second and Sixth Corps fought on Saturday last under auspices altogether new to their experience of the battle-field. Some of the hardest fighting of the day was done under the eye of the President of the United States, who witnessed the conflict from a near standpoint.

Amusements.

Gottschalk in Brooklyn.—The first of Gottschalk's farewell concerts was given last night at the Brooklyn Academy, assisted by Miss Lucy Simons and Harry Sanderson and Mr. Eben. The house was filled by the usual "concert audience," and Mr. Gottschalk was, of course, enthusiastically received. Everything he played was encored, and criticism finds no place where the utmost cordiality subsists between player and audience. Miss Simons sang most acceptably and produced a favorable impression. Harry Sanderson was always a favorite in Brooklyn, and on this occasion riveted the friendly fetters which bind him to the lovers of music in the City of Churches. The last concert will be given on Saturday night.

De Katow and Wehli Concerts in Brooklyn.—The Strakosch combination give the first of two concerts, to-night, at the Brooklyn Academy. An excellent programme is provided, which will, of course, be well interpreted.

Obituary.

MR. JACOB LITTLE.

Yesterday morning, Mr. Jacob Little, the well-known financier and stock broker, died at his residence in Union-square, after a long and painful illness. Mr. Little was born in Newburyport, Mass., and came to to this city about the year 1817. He entered the office of Mr. Joseph Barker, then the largest banker in the city, and remained with him for nearly six years, when he commenced business on his own account. In 1825 he became a member of the Board of Brokers, and soon made his influence felt in that body. His stock operations amounted to millions, and were conducted with a boldness and success that astonished his associates. For the last five years Mr. Little took a less prominent part in financial operations.

The deceased was in his sixty-eighth year. He leaves a widow, who is amply provided for, but no family. His funeral will take place on Friday morning, at Grace Church. It will be remembered that his brother, Mr. E. B. Little, a member of the firm of Jacob Little & Co., died last Autumn. The Board of Brokers will adjourn on Friday, at a mark of respect for the memory of the deceased, and attend his funeral in a body.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

Washington, Tuesday, March 28.

THE REBEL FORCES BEFORE PETERSBURGH.

It has been so frequently asserted that Gen. Lee had dispatched a very considerable force of the rebel army at Richmond to Johnston's assistance, that it has become almost common belief. Nevertheless, it has been well known by Gen. Grant and the Government, that such has not been the case, and the battle of Saturday fully confirms the fact. Lee has sent little or no force from his army to North Carolina, or anywhere else. He cannot afford it. He is too weak in numbers to spare a single regiment from his present lines. The forces in front of our Petersburgh lines are the same that have been there ever since Early's corps came from the valley, viz: A. P. Hill's corps on the rebel right; Gordon's corps, formerly Early's, resting on the rebel left; with a couple of divisions, one of which is Bushrod Johnson's, lying between the James and the Appomattox. Longstreet has two divisions belonging to his old corps on the north side of the James.

A. P. Hill's corps is now commanded by Gen. R. H. Anderson, Hill himself being in North Carolina, commanding the forces heretofore commanded by Bragg. Lee is not giving the latter very much to say about the campaign in North Carolina.

THE SPIRIT OF THE REBEL SOLDIERS.

Among the developments of the recent engagement before Petersburgh, is the fact that the spirit of the rebel soldiers is thoroughly broken. A letter from a general officer, written on Saturday evening, says: "The result of to-day's operations has demonstrated the fact that the spirit of their men is broken. The charge of Early's old corps was a feeble thing—not equal to what one of their brigades used to do in days gone by. To-day's proceedings must thoroughly convince Lee that he cannot effect an entrance through our present line, even if he should mass his entire army in column by corps."

GEN. CROOK TO REPORT TO GEN. GRANT.

Maj.-Gen. Geo. Crook has been ordered to report to Gen. Grant for assignment to command. He will probably succeed Gen. Kautz, in the command of the cavalry division on the north of the James, the entire cavalry force being once more under the command of Gen. Sheridan.

THE PRESIDENT STILL AT CITY POINT.

The President and family are still visiting at City Point. He took early occasion to personally thank Gen. Parke and the officers and men of the Ninth Corps for their gallantry during the battle of Saturday. The President arrived on the field just in time to witness the retreat of the enemy.

ARRIVAL OF WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

There were large arrivals of wounded Union soldiers, prisoners and deserters here to-day. The steamer Lizzie Baker brought up two hundred and eighteen rebel deserters and one hundred and forty-nine prisoners of war, who desired to take the oath of allegiance. One thousand six hundred of the rebel prisoners arrived at Point Lookout to-day. The hospital steamer State of Maine also arrived here with three hundred and fifty wounded, sixty of whom were rebels.

ANOTHER EXCURSION.

Excursions at sea under official patronage are now quite fashionable. Another party left to-day in the steamer Santiago de Cuba, to be gone three weeks. Beside stopping at Charleston and Savannah, she will also go to Havana and New-Orleans. The party consisted of Capt. Fox, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and lady; a son of Secretary Welles; J. M. Forbes and daughter, of Boston; J. G. Nicolay, the President's Private Secretary, and several others.

THE MATTER OF TRADE PERMITS.

The President's conference with Gen. Grant is associated in many minds with the latter's recent order concerning trade in insurrectionary districts; not that the President will overrule Gen. Grant's wishes in the least, but that the whole matter is being fully discussed, with a view to arriving at some uniform practice in regard to permits for trade which shall not interfere with military interests, and shall at the same time bring out the required products from the insurrectionary districts. On this point, Messrs. W. P. Mellen and H. A. Risley, two of the leading supervising agents of the Treasury Department, are present at City Point and are undoubtedly able to give all the information desired by Gen. Grant.

THE CASE OF MR. OSBON.

B. S. Osbon, of the Bureau of Naval Information, New-York, for a long time incarcerated in the Old Capitol Prison, on charge of having caused the premature publication of the particulars of the first Fort Fisher expedition, was to-day sent to New-York to be tried by military commission, under the orders of Gen. Dix. It is to be hoped that Mr. Osbon may get there what he has not been able to obtain here, viz.: a speedy trial.

PRESENTATION TO A BRAVE SAILOR.

The officers and crew of the United States steamer Tristam Shandy, now under repairs at Norfolk, Va., previous to her departure to join the East Gulf Squadron, have presented the sum of $400 to Edward Williams, one of the ship's crew, who lost his right leg while gallantly fighting in the second attack on Fort Fisher.

OPERATIC.

Maretzek's opera troupe opened a short season last night at Ford's Theatre. The audience was not as large as it should have been, but the performance was very successful. To-night there is a larger audience to hear "Fra Diavolo," in which Miss Kellogg appears.

THE ALBEMARLE CANAL.

Communication between Norfolk and Newbern, via the Albemarle Canal, has been resumed.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

Washington, Tuesday, March 28.

THE PRESIDENT ON THE BATTLE-FIELD.

A gentleman who, to-day, arrived from the front, says that while on Saturday morning, Gen. Grant and the President and his party were on their way from City Point to witness a review in the Army of the Potomac, and when about twenty-five miles from that place, Gen. Parke, from the battle-field, approached and gave a circumstantial account of the fight at Fort Steadman, Lieut.-Gen. Grant thanked him for his skill and bravery and the President also complimented him highly for the manner in which he and the officers and men under his command had conducted themselves in that conflict. The party then resumed their journey, and stopped at a fort within a mile and a half of a subsequent action, from the parapet of which they had a good view of the contending forces. They afterward continued their trip, visiting many points of interest, their extreme stopping-place being within six miles of Richmond. On this excursion Gen. Grant and several members of his staff, together with Gen. Sheridan, accompanied the President's party. On their return they witnessed the crossing of Sheridan's cavalry from the north to the south side of the James.

THE PRESIDENT'S HEALTH IMPROVING.

The President has been indulging in riding on horseback, and his health has been considerably improved since he left Washington. He may return for a day or two.

WHITE'S GUERRILLAS.

Major White's guerrillas, who have been operating so industriously of late in Fairfax County, have gone up the Shenandoah Valley to a new field of operations.

MOVEMENTS OF ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOX.

Capt. Fox, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, left to-day for Savannah, on business connected with his department. He was accompanied by his wife, and Mr. J. G. Nicolay, and others.

OUR ARMIES IN SPLENDID SPIRITS.

The best possible spirit animates our troops, and prominent military men seem to be well satisfied with the present aspect of the situation.

PRESENTATION TO THE COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS.

The clerks and employes in the Bureau of the Commissioner of Patents, Hon. D. P. Holloway, have presented that gentleman with a handsome album containing their photographs, some one hundred in number. The occasion was the fourth anniversary of Mr. Holloway's control of that department, and his associates took this method of expressing their appreciation of the uniform kindness they had received at his hands, and their respect for him as an officer and a gentlemen.

EXTENSION OF THE GOVERNMENT PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT.

The Government Printing Bureau building is about to be extended, Congress having made a liberal appropriation for that purpose. The printing has accumulated to such a degree that some large documents ordered to be printed in December are not yet finished, and much of the other work has to be executed at private offices in the city.

THE ST. AUGUSTINE TAX SALE SUSPENDED.

The tax sale appointed for the 10th of April at St. Augustine, Fla., has been suspended until further orders. Parties who contemplated visiting St. Augustine in connection therewith, will govern themselves accordingly.

ARRIVAL OF WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

The hospital steamer State of Maine arrived here this morning, from City Point, with 366 wounded in the engagement of Saturday, at Fort Steadman.

REBEL PRISONERS AND DESERTERS.

Yesterday a transport left City Point for Point Lookout with 1,600 rebel prisoners, captured on Saturday.

To day the steamer Lizzie Baker brought up 219 rebel deserters, all of whom came within our lines on the 23d and 24th inst. The steamer also brought down 149 prisoners, also captured on Saturday.

THE DRAFT BEGINS AGAIN.

Money Coming from the State—Maj. Dodge's Order—What the Bounty Bill Does and Does Not—Facts about the Draft Hitherto—Circular on the County Loan—Ward Meetings Last Night.

The draft begins again to-day. The pending amendment to the Thirty Million Bounty Bill was passed yesterday, and in the afternoon Mr. Blunt received a telegram from State Paymaster-General Marvin, saying so, and adding that he hoped to be able to aid Mr. Blunt to-day—that is, (it is presumed) to send down a State Paymaster to pay out the required bounties in the city. Mr. Blunt, we understand, with two other gentlemen, had an interview with Maj. Dodge yesterday afternoon, but the Provost-Marshal does not consider himself justified in further delay, and, of course, no absolute assurance could be given that bounty money was to be at hand to-day.

Maj. Dodge has accordingly issued orders to Lieut. Ward, of the Fifth District, to draft to-day in the Tenth Ward; to Capt. Dunning, in the Ninth District, to draft to-day in the Twenty-second Ward; and to Capt. Erhardt, in the Fouth District, to send notices to the drafted men in the First and Fourth Wards, to report for examination, beginning Tuesday, April 4. Capt. Erhardt is to draft the Fifth Ward, after finishing the others.

The reporting for examination is to be as follows: In each district the first hundred and twenty-five men drawn are to be notified to report on April 4; the next hundred and twenty-five on the 5th, and so on. All those thus reporting, and accepted by the examining authorities, will then and there be held for service; so that those who go to the office on that day must prepare not to return home at once, unless sure of exemption. Nor will any extension of the time set for reporting be allowed.

Men thus accepted and held will be permitted to furnish substitutes up to the time of leaving the rendezvous at Hart Island for the front.

While these operations are going on, the work of recruiting both volunteers and substitutes is to be allowed to proceed, with no check or hindrance whatever.

The number of recruits obtained in the whole city on Monday was 33, of whom only 11 were volunteers. During that day a sum of $40,000 was obtained, in small subscriptions, by the County Committee, which has enabled some volunteers to be enlisted to-day.

The State Bounty Bill, under which it is confidently expected that abundance of money will be paid, allows money to volunteers and drafted men as follows:

To three-year volunteers, $600; two-year men, $460; one-year men, $300. Drafted men are to be paid $250. The law allow $25 hand-money, forbids towns, counties, &c., from raising any more money for volunteers or substitutes, but says nothing against doing it for drafted men. The section covering this point is as follows:

Sec. 4. No city, county or town shall hereafter borrow or raise by tax, any money, or authorize the borrowing or raising by tax, any money for the purpose of paying bounties to volunteers or substitutes, under the said call dated 19th December, 1864, or any future call, and no more than $25 for hand-money for procuring each volunteer; nor shall any city, county or town, or any individual or individuals, pay any money for such purpose or purposes, otherwise than as is herein provided, (except that an individual may in any way hire a substitute to exempt himself from drafts.)

There are obscure reports of some few threats to resist the draft, but they cannot be traced to any authentic source. It is also stated that some persons are running away from this city and Brooklyn to evade the draft.

The whole number of recruits enlisted in New-York during the past six weeks was about 3,000, which is after the rate of about eighty men a day; the Government requiring two hundred.

The list of wards thus far drafted is: First, Second, Fourth, Seventh, Ninth, Eleventh, (only the quota itself, and not the additional 100 per cent.,) Twelfth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-second.

The deficiencies in the wards of the city up to Saturday were as follows, as far as the authorities could give them:

Wards.	Men Due.	Wards.	Men Due.
1	306	11	1,049
2	116	12	370
3	174	13	512
4	490	14	523
5	542	15	495
6	423	16	690
7	720	17	1,574
8	761	19	652
9	791	22	753
10	712

The following resolution and circular, sent into this office yesterday, sufficiently explain the measures taken by the County Committee, to which they refer:

Headquarters County Committee on Volunteering, City Hall Park, Broadway,
Corner of Chambers-st., New-York, March 25, 1865.

At a meeting of the New-York County Committee on Volunteering held this day, it was unanimously,

Resolved, That Gen. Wm. H. Anthon be, and he is hereby authorized and requested to wait on capitalists, banking houses and moneyed institutions for the purpose of securing subscriptions to the seven per cent. Volunteer Loan, authorized by the Board of Supervisors of New-York County, January 10, 1865, and confirmed by Act of the Legislature, Chapter 29, Laws of 1865.

C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Mayor.
ORISON BLUNT,
W. M. TWEED,
ELIJAH F. PURDY,
MATTHEW T. BRENNAN, Comptroller.
Committee on Volunteering of New-York County.

Dear Sir: Experience has shown exclusively that a compulsory conscription or draft would be one of the greatest calamities which could happen to the City of New-York, while it would, probably, like that which took place in the Summer of 1863, prove an utter failure, so far as the great object of filling the national armies is concerned.

A due regard, therefore, for the comfort of many families which will be left destitute if their head is conscripted, for the peace of our city, which is in some danger of being again disturbed, and for the national cause, which will be injured by the failure to supply men at this crisis, should induce us to bend all our energies to the only true and American mode of raising troops, namely, by volunteering.

Thousands of men stand ready to volunteer at this moment, but the County Committee are destitute of funds, while nearly a million of County Volunteer Loan seven per cent. Bonds, beyond all question the best investment in the market, remain untaken.

I respectfully request you to lay this subject before your Board of Directors, with a few remarks upon the importance of the crisis, and to urge upon them the necessity of making as liberal a subscription as possible.

Please direct your answer to me as soon as possible, at Box No. 2,408 New-York Post-office.

Yours, respectfully, WM. HENRY ANTHON.

MEETING IN THE THIRD WARD.

At a meeting of citizens last evening, in Matthew's Hall, Greenwich-street and Barclay, a Ward Volunteering Association was organized, and the following named gentlemen were chosen permanent officers thereof: President, Mr. Edwin M. Haggerty; Vice-Presidents, John Patten and T. D. Winchester; Secretaries, Samuel N. Le Comte and John J. Finn; Treasurer, John M. Costa. On motion, Mr. John M. Costa was appointed to represent the ward at a meeting of ward delegates, having in view the adoption of a uniform rate of hand-money and bounties. A Finance Committee of two from each election district in the ward was appointed, as follows: Messrs. H. Welbrook, J. Bennett, William Britton, Ernest Webber, James H. Packer, John W. Cropsey, Amos Stookey, and John J. Taylor. A gentleman having stated that he could find between Barclay and Robinson streets, from ten to fifteen exempts whose names have not been stricken from the enrollment lists. A committee was appointed to examine the enrollment, ascertain how many names of exempts are thereon, and strive to have the quota of the ward reduced correspondingly; and Messrs. Fitzgerald, Graham, Carter, Costa, Potts, Callahan and Hurley were chosen said committee. Without further action, the meeting adjourned to this evening, at the same hour and place.

MEETING IN THE FIFTH WARD.

The Ward Volunteer Association met at Laird's Fifth Ward Hotel, last evening, and prepared an address, which is to be distributed this morning to all the inhabitants of the ward, setting forth that the Volunteering Executive Committee have made arrangements to fill the entire quota of the ward within fifteen days, if they can pay $50 hand-money. They therefore call upon every person whose names is on the enrollment list to subscribe something toward filling the hand-money fund, and they add that contributions may be made to the following-named gentlemen:

S. S. Wyckoff, No. 104 Murray-street; Dr. Wm. B. Eager, No. 9 Beach-street; Chas. M. Hall, No. 43 North Moore-street; Peter Eager, Druggist, corner North Moore and Hudson; M. M. Laird, Fifth Ward Hotel; James M. Tuthill, No. 114 Warren-street; Patrick Kehoe, No. 322 Greenwich-street; Nathan Kingsley, No. 105 Franklin-street; M. Hasseldick, No. 391 Washington-street; C. Puckhafar, No. 12 Harrison-street; H. Hazenkamp, corner Jay and Hudson streets; Cornelius Quinn, No. 70 Laight-street; Jas. Pyle, No. 67 North Moore-street; James Price, No. 55 North Moore-street; Dennis Flanigan, corner Varick and Canal-street; Jacob La Wall, No. 60 North Moore-street; David W. Waters, No. 111 Hudson-street.

Application to enlist can be made to any of the following Committee:

Aldermen Michael Norton, and John T. Henry; Patrick Kehoe, Charles H. Patrick, George A. Barney, Nathan Kingsley, Joseph B. Taylor, Gen. Hiram Walbridge, Judge Dennis Quinn, S. S. Wyckoff, James M. Tuthill, Luther Horton, John Walker, Charles Riley.

MEETING IN THE FOURTH WARD.

A meeting of residents of the Fourth Ward was held last evening at the Shakespeare Hotel, for the purpose of adopting measures to fill the quota of the ward. Mr. DANIEL LEAHY was elected chairman.

On motion it was resolved to appoint a committee of five from each election district, with power to raise and dispense funds to carry out the objects of the meeting.

Mr. JOHN HEALY was elected delegate to the central committee, which meets this evening.

A gentleman announced that Mr. MORGAN JONES was not able to be present, but he had subscribed $100 to aid in recruiting.

A subscription list was opened and about $1,200 was raised.

Nearly all of the subscriptions were from workingmen, and ranged from ten to twenty-five dollars each.

A committee of one from each election district was appointed for the purpose of conferring with the Provost-Marshal and facilitating recruiting.

Mr. WOOD made a few eloquent remarks, and was followed by Mr. J. B. HARRINGTON. The latter said that the time to resist the draft had passed; it could not be done now, the election of last Fall having settled that question. It was useless to abuse the draft; the only way was to fill the quota and avoid it.

After the transaction of some unimportant business the meeting adjourned.

The Draft in Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURGH, Tuesday, March 28.

The following dispatch has been received by Gov. CURTIN from the War Department:

To the Governor of Pennsylvania:

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, March 28.

The time for raising new organizations is hereby extended to April 15. But this authority does not postpone nor interfere with the draft. Mustering officers will continue to muster in.

(Signed) JAMES B. FRY,
Provost-Marshal-General.

A Charger for Gen. Grant.

It is proposed to present to Gen. GRANT the splendid gray stallion "Duke of Wellington," lately brought from Missouri to this city. The horse is valued at $5,000, and his owner, Mr. JAMES O. SWINNEY, of Brooklyn, offers to give $500 on his own account, the balance to be made up by the friends of Gen. GRANT. The "Duke" was run out of Missouri during STERLING PRICE's raid into that State, last autumn. He can boast of a high pedigree, having been sired by Imp. Hooten. He will be exhibited at Central Park, on Thursday next, at 4 P. M.

The horse is to be sent to Gen. GRANT immediately, so that the General can use him in making his triumphal entry into Richmond. Names and contributions will be received by Messrs. CHARLES B. FALLENSTEIN & SONS, No. 56 Front-street, on Friday and Saturday next.

Sundry remonstrances were presented against the Broadway Railroad Bill.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. COOK, Chairman of the committee of nine, asked to be excused from further service on said committee, because of some offensive allusion to the committee, he understood to have been made by the Senator from the Seventeenth District.

Mr. HOBBS denied making the remark imputed to him, and excuse was denied—3 to 23.

The bill incorporating a company to build docks and warehouses in the port of Newark, for quarantine purposes, was amended on motion of Mr. LAW, by striking out the clause whereby the State guarantees to the company 7 per cent. on its investment, and then progress was reported.

The bill amending the quarantine law was next taken up.

Mr. CHRISTIE moved to amend by providing that the earnings of the Quarantine steam tug shall be paid over to the Quarantine Commissioners, instead of to the Health Officer. He said he had information to the effect that this boat earns at least five thousand dollars a year more than it costs to run it, and those earnings ought to go to the State.

Mr. MURPHY denied that the boat earned any such profits. On the contrary, last year the boat cost the Health Officer $300 more than it earned.

The amendment was lost.

Mr. CHRISTIE moved an amendment providing that the jurisdiction of the Health Officer shall cease as soon as the vessel is discharged from Quarantine. The amendment was lost.

Mr. CHRISTIE moved that the Master, owner or consignee of any vessel, or person carrying the written permission of either, may board any vessel in Quarantine. Carried.

Mr. CHRISTIE moved to strike out the clause giving the Health Officer authority to detain for twenty days any person who may invade the Quarantine grounds.

Mr. MURPHY opposed the motion, saying that for three or four months the life of the Health Officer had been threatened, and he was in favor of throwing around him all the protection of the State.

The amendment was lost.

Mr. CHRISTIE moved that healthy emigrants who have been exposed to infectious diseases, be sent to Ward's Island during the period of the incubation of the disease. Adopted.

The bill was ordered to a third reading.

FROM EUROPE.

Exaggerated Reports Concerning the Rebel Pirate Shenandoah—The Case of the St. Alban's Raiders—The Dublin International Exhibition.

The National Steam Navigation Company's steamer Virginia, Capt. GRACE, which left Liverpool at 10 o'clock on the morning of the 15th, and Queenstown on the 16th March, arrived here last evening. The news is chiefly anticipated.

The North American reached Liverpool at noon on the 12th inst.

The Europa arrived at Queenstown at 10 o'clock on the evening of the 12th, and reached Liverpool early on the morning of the 14th.

The vessels of the National Steam Navigation Company are announced to run weekly between Liverpool and New-York on and after the 28th of March.

The Liverpool Courier says:

"The report by telegraph from Melbourne, (received per Australasian,) that the Confederate steamer Shenandoah had captured and burnt eleven Federal vessels since leaving the Cape, appears to be exaggerated. It would appear the only vessel she has captured, additional to those already reported, is the Delphine, a small American schooner, bound either from New-York to Goree, or from the latter port to Boston, that being the round voyage for which she left New-York on the 21st of September last."

In the House of Commons on the 13th, Mr. LAYARD, in reply to Mr. PEACOCK, stated that Capt. BEALL, the Confederate officer, had not been surrendered to the United States Government by the Canadian authorities. He was arrested in the State of New-York. Lord R. CECIL asked if the persons now on trial in Canada would be surrendered without the facts of the case having been submitted to the Imperial Government.

The Attorney-General said these questions could not be considered in the abstract, but such cases must be dealt with on their own merits. He apprehended that the Judges of the Canadian Courts would execute the law within their own jurisdiction, and that, except in a very extraordinary case, the Imperial Government had no right of interference within Canadian territory.

It is announced that the International Exhibition at Dublin will be opened by the Prince of Wales, on the 9th of May.

A Correction.

GAIETIES CONCERT SALOON, NO. 616 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, March 28, 1865.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I read an article in your paper of the 27th inst. of the arrest of a man named RUSHMORE by Col. BAKER, for enticing furloughed soldiers to desert and passing counterfeit money, in which you say he was the proprietor of this saloon. By contradicting this statement you will do me and my friends a great favor, for at the time of RUSHMORE's arrest he was a bar-tender, in the employ of a man by the name of GEORGE HAYDON, proprietor of the Melodeon Concert Saloon, No. 663 Broadway, which saloon is not in any way connected with the Gaieties Saloon, No. 616 Broadway.

Perry's Moth and Freckle Lotion.

Chloasma, or Mothpatch, (also called Liverspot,) and Lentigo or Freckles, are often very annoying, particularly to ladies of light complexion, for the discolored spots show more plainly on the face of a blonde than of a brunette; but they greatly mar the beauty of either; and any preparation that will effectually remove them WITHOUT INJURING THE TEXTURE OR COLOR OF THE SKIN, is certainly a desideratum. Dr. B. C. PERRY, who has made diseases of the skin a specialty, has discovered a remedy for these discolorations, which is at once prompt, infallible and harmless.

SUCCESS IN BUSINESS.

No business can be truly successful which is not founded on a real fitness of things. The article made or sold must have intrinsic merit and supply a public want. Success issuing from the clap-trap of advertising, or the tricks of trade, or mere pretension and display, will be only apparent, and, in the end, but deceive the operator and those who trust him. But if an article supplies a public want and fairly meets its reasonable expectations, its success and general adoption is merely a question of time. It may be retarded by adverse influences or sped by prospering gales, but in the end it is sure to win. HUMPHREY'S HOMEOPATHIC SPECIFICS had their origin in a great public want—medicines for all the common wants of enlightened life—curatives that father, mother, nurse or traveler could always have with them, and always rely upon—so simple that mistake could not be made in the selection, so harmless that all might use them with impunity, and so efficient that all might rely upon them with safety. Such they have proved. Thousands of families use them daily for all the ailments and sicknesses of life, and rarely are seriously sick, or have need to call a physician. Thousands, taking some single Specific, have cured themselves of chronic diseases which have been the bane of their lives, and upon which they have spent hundreds in vain, and among the millions who use them, none are found to question their purity or efficacy.

Humphrey's Specifics

combine all the advantages of the best Homeopathic treatment, without its intricacy or uncertainty. They are prepared by a physician of over twenty years' Homeopathic experience; they have been tried in every conceivable manner, and they have been indorsed and recommended in the highest terms by the hundreds of thousands who daily use them.

With a Case in Your House,

you may prevent sickness, prevent suffering, prevent expense and loss of time, or the children having the Measles, or Scarlet Fever, or Whooping Cough, or even Fever, by using preventives in the case.

You May Cure Your Children

You May Cure Yourself

of headache, weak stomach, or indigestion, or biliousness, or catarrh, or a bad cold, or sore throat, or hoarseness, or liver complaint, or piles, or constipation, or rheumatism, or sore or weak eyes, or salt rheum, or kidney disease, or general debility, or even asthma, with these specifics.

Thousands of Invalids

have been perfectly cured of long-standing ailments, the plague and bane of their lives, and on which they have spent hundreds in vain, by simply using these invaluable specifics. Not a family who have ever had one of these Family cases of HUMPHREY'S SPECIFICS, but would give five times its cost, rather than be without it.

AN EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENT IN ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—Dr. M. LEVETT, No. 832 Broadway, has always ranked among our first dentists, and dentistry owes much to his scientific researches and inventions; but his new Patent Atmospheric Pressure Plate comes nearer to perfection than any method of the kind we have ever seen. The plate is made of reticulated gold-web and india-rubber base, which is so light as hardly to be a weight in the hand, and is at the same time strong and extremely elastic. By a series of air-cells it is held immovable in the mouth, and is so small and compact that it does not interfere with speech or taste. It is, in short, the lightest, the most cleanly, the firmest and the most comfortable denture that was ever put in the mouth, and consequently we commend it over all others.—Watson's Art Journal.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"A NOVEL WITHOUT A FAULT."

HARPER & BROTHERS, New-York,
PUBLISH THIS DAY
CHRISTIAN'S MISTAKE.
A Novel.
BY THE AUTHOR OF
"John Halifax, Gentleman."
12mo, Cloth, $1 50.

From the London Times.

A more charming story, to our taste, has rarely been written. Within the compass of a single volume, the writer has hit off a circle of varied characters, all true to nature, some true to the highest nature; and she has entangled them in a story which keeps us in suspense till its knot is happily and gracefully resolved, while, at the same time, a pathetic interest is sustained by an art of which it would be difficult to analyze the secret. It is a choice gift to be able thus to render human nature so truly, to penetrate its depths with such a searching sagacity, and to illuminate them with a radiance so eminently the writer's own. Even if tried by the standard of the Archbishop of York, we should expect that even he would pronounce "Christian's Mistake" a novel without a fault.

From the London Athenæum.

A graceful story, written with much delicacy and purity of touch; the heroine is charming.

From the London Examiner.

It deserves a place in that little collection of clever and wholesome stories that forms one of the comforts of a well-appointed home. There is an unaffected worthiness of tone in all Miss Mulock's writing that gives weight and dignity to her simplest conceptions. Her story of "Christian's Mistake" shows, through unforced incidents, delightfully set forth, how a firm allegiance to duty is the great transmuter of base ores of life into finest gold.

From the London Sun.

This new story, by the popular author of "John Halifax," is one of the most charming specimens of her happiest style. It is one of those delightful books which are not only pleasant to read, but which leave an elevating influence behind them.

FINANCIAL.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes bearing seven and three-tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These notes are issued under date of June 15, 1865, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder, into

U. S. 5-20 SIX PER CENT
GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are worth a premium, which increases the actual profit on the 7-30 Loan, and its exemption from State and municipal taxation adds from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on other property. The interest is payable in currency semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to
One cent per day on a $50 note.
Two cents per day on a $100 note.
Ten cents per day on a $500 note.
Twenty cents per day on a $1,000 note.
$1 per day on a $5,000 note.

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions, and the notes forwarded at once. The interest to 15th June next will be paid in advance by the local subscription agents at the time of subscribing. This is now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its su[illegible]rior advantages will make it the GREAT POPULA[illegible]R LOAN OF THE PEOPLE.

Less than $300,000,000 of [illegible]he Loan authorized by the last Congress are now on the [illegible]arket. This amount, at the rate at which it is being absorb[illegible]d, will all be subscribed for within four months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National banks, State Banks, and private bankers throughout the country, have generally agreed to receive subscriptions at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—THE TREASURER of the Fire Department, with much pleasure, acknowledges the receipt of $5,911 13, by the hands of Albert J. Delatour, Esq., Treasurer of the Firemen's Ball Committee, being the net proceeds of the Thirty-sixth Annual Ball, given at the Academy of Music, Jan. 30, 1865, in aid of the Charitable Fund of the Department.
JOHN S. GILES, Treasurer.

The Treasurer, in behalf of the department, tender their sincere thanks to the Ball Committee for their untiring exertions and excellent management in presenting for the patronage of our fellow-citizens the most brilliant entertainment in the festivities of the past season, the result of which is most gratifying to the friends and members of the department; to our fellow-citizens who so generously responded to the efforts of the committee, we tender our warmest acknowledgments.

The arduous duties of a fireman, involving comfort, health and often life itself, and the casualties of war—for no other organization has so liberally contributed to the ranks of our army and navy, to sustain unbroken our glorious Union, as the Fire Department of the City of New-York—all largely contribute to fill the pages of affliction and distress, to alleviate which every officer connected with the management of the funds cheerfully and gratuitously bestow their time and service. It affords us much gratification that our appeal in the cause of suffering humanity has met with a response that will enable us for a time to afford relief to those who, through misfortune, claim our care and sympathy. These persons are among the most exemplary and worthy members of society, many of whom are far advanced in the vale of years; many have not only been blessed with the comforts but have been surrounded with the luxuries of life, and the strange vicissitudes of fortune that have marked their peculiar lot in life are calculated to awaken the warmest sympathies of our nature. We regret extremely that individuals, some of whom owe their elevation in life to their connection with the Fire Department, and unmindful of the gratitude, at least, they owe to its members, have leagued with others as unscrupulous as themselves to malign an organization that for near three-quarters of a century has, for efficiency and benevolence, been a model institution of the world. As an evidence of its utility and efficiency, the principal cities in England are abolishing the old servile, inefficient paid Fire Department, and substituting, as a more reliable organization, the volunteer system. We, however, feel confident that our Legislature will not hastily destroy an organization whose reliability in the performance of their duties as firemen, and their unequaled system of benevolence, has no parallel in history of kindred institutions.

MUSICAL.

CHICKERING & SONS
MANUFACTURERS OF GRAND, SQUARE, AND UPRIGHT PIANO-FORTES, No. 652 BROADWAY.—The superiority of these instruments has of late been amply demonstrated by the voluntary testimony of the foremost artists of the day, who claim for them excellencies of tone and workmanship hitherto unobtained by any other makers.

Mr. GOTTSCHALK's constant use of the NEW SCALE CHICKERING GRAND PIANO-FORTES has severely tested their musical qualities, and resulted in establishing the justice of the very flattering estimation in which they are held.

Messrs. CHICKERING & SONS are Sole Agents for the celebrated Alexandre Organs for the United States.

STEINWAY & SON
GOLD MEDAL GRAND AND SQUARE PIANOS are now considered the best in Europe as well as this country, having received the first Prize Medal at the World's Exhibition in London, 1862.

The principal reason why the Steinway Pianos are superior to all others is, that the firm is composed of five practical piano-forte makers, (father and four sons,) who invent all their own improvements, and under whose personal supervision every part of the instrument is manufactured. Warerooms Nos. 71 and 73 East 14th-st., between Union-square and Irving-place, New-York.

THE WEBER PIANO-FORTE
Is admitted the best Piano-forte made, because the maker, besides being a practical mechanic of long experience, is also a thorough musician, thus combining advantages possessed by no other manufacturer in the United States. Such is the testimony of S. B. Mills, Robert Heller, Geo. F. Bristow, Wm. Mason, C. Jerome Hopkins, Charles Fradel, Max Maretzek, Carl Anschutz, John Zundel, Maurice Strakosch, Giovani Sconcia, Edward and Henry Mollenhauer, Louis Schreiber, Emil and Fred Brandeis, W. R. Bassford, Theo. Moelling, and every good musician in the United States. Warerooms No. 155 West Broadway, near Canal-st.

SHERMAN'S ARMY.

The Battles with Johnston's Forces.

INTERESTING PARTICULARS OF THE REBEL DEFEAT

Special Dispatch to the Cincinnati Commercial.

WASHINGTON, Monday, March 27, 1865.

I forward a more detailed account of the two battles fought by SHERMAN's troops in their progress to a junction with SCHOFIELD and TERRY. The first fight is called the battle of Moore's Cross Roads. Gen. SHERMAN, after leaving Fayetteville, decided to form a junction near Goldsboro.

The enemy—Gen. HARDEE's forces, consisting of of the Carolina and Georgia troops released from Charleston and Savannah, had retired in the direction of Raleigh. It was necessary to deceive him as to the line of march, and make him believe Raleigh was the point proposed. Accordingly, the corps of Gen. SLOCUM's command, the Twentieth, moved up the road to a point twelve miles in advance, where it halted, and allowed KILPATRICK's cavalry to pass and take the front.

As usual, he was in this case to cover the movement of the army in the direction of Goldsboro, by demonstrating and feigning well toward Raleigh. He had passed the Twentieth Corps, and reached a point four miles from Averysboro, where the foragers, mounted and dismounted, came dashing in from the front, reporting the enemy's infantry to be advancing in line of battle.

KILPATRICK deployed the Ninth Michigan Cavalry, and sent them rapidly forward to attack and hold the enemy in check until his troops could be brought forward and massed. Col. WALKER's Fifth Michigan Cavalry met and drove in the enemy's advance. He dismounted his entire regiment, and on foot forced the rebel infantry back across a ravine which the following day became our line of battle.

KILPATRICK's cavalry had now been brought up and placed in position, dismounted, together with eight pieces of artillery. In the meantime word had been sent to Gen. WILLIAMS, commanding the Twentieth Corps, for reinforcements. Before these could reach our cavalry the enemy advanced in line of battle, with every intention of charging KILPATRICK's position.

Col. WALKER fell back within the barricades when the line advanced, but received so heavy a fire from the artillery and carbines of the enemy that he fell back again to a ravine. A brigade of infantry now came up and was placed in position with the cavalry. Everything remained quiet during the night. In the morning KILPATRICK advanced with his whole force, the infantry, under HOLLY, having the centre. The enemy was steadily forced back and at last driven within his works near Moore's Cross Roads.

CASEY's brigade of WARD's division, Twentieth Corps, now came up, and were shoved in upon the left and directed, together with Col. SPENCER's Cavalry brigade, to assault the enemy's works upon the right. While these preparations were going on heavy masses of rebel infantry moved upon KILPATRICK's right, and partly succeeded in turning his flank.

Col. JORDAN's brigade of cavalry, consisting of the Ninth Pennsylvania, Eighth Indiana and Second and Third Kentucky, was pushed in on our right to prevent this movement.

The fighting at this point was very severe. The enemy's infantry charged our cavalry repeatedly, but the Eighth Indiana, Ninth Pennsylvania, and Ninth Michigan dismounted, held the position, and resisted every attempt of the enemy to drive them from the trees and their heavily constructed barricade.

In the meantime Maj.-Gen. WILLIAMS came upon the field with a portion of the Twentieth Corps, and soon after Gens. SHERMAN and SLOCUM arrived in person, and the infantry upon the left was ordered to advance. The enemy's works were carried, and he forced from his position with the loss of his guns and caissons. One division after another of our infantry was now pushed in upon the right and left.

KILPATRICK's cavalry had gone to the right, and had succeeded in reaching the Goldsboro road, which placed him directly in the rear of the enemy, when a heavy body of rebel infantry, evidently reinforcements, struck the Ninth Ohio Cavalry in front and flank, and, notwithstanding the exertions of Col. HAMILTON and the bravery of his men, the regiment was forced back upon the Ninth Pennsylvania Cavalry, which was also forced to retire, but so slowly as to give time for Col. SELVIDGE, commanding the right of our infantry, to change front with his brigade.

The cavalry fell back on a line with our infantry, and the rebel infantry in advancing received a cross-fire from Col. SELVIDGE's entire brigade, when KILPATRICK, with Col. JORDAN's cavalry brigade, charged straight upon the enemy, driving him in confusion down upon the Goldsboro road, and back to his original position.

This ended the fighting on the right, and all further attempts of the enemy to turn our flank in that direction.

The enemy stubbornly fell back before each attack, and when night fell in still held the cross-roads. During the night, however, he retired in the direction of Raleigh, leaving his killed and wounded on the field.

This was the first real hard fighting of the campaign. The troops did splendidly. The cavalry fought side by side with the infantry, mounted and dismounted, and were the admiration of the entire army.

The loss in the Twentieth Corps was quite severe, and in the cavalry particularly so, the Eighth Indiana, Col. JONES, loosing upward of seventy killed and wounded.

I bring lists of the casualties of this engagement. Gen. ATKINS and Col. JORDAN, commanding the cavalry upon the right, deserve great credit for the skillful manner in which they fought their commands for the first time opposed to infantry.

The rebel troops, opposed in this fight were McLAWS' division of cavalry, and FOLLIVER's and RHETT's artillery brigades. These are heavy artillery. They composed the Southern garrisons, and from Col. RHETT, commandant at Fort Sumter, taken prisoner by KILPATRICK, it appears that these organizations were very full, his own regiment, for instance, at one time numbering not less than 1,500 men.

The road to Goldsboro being now apparently open, the left wing continued its march, without opposition, until the 19th.

Meanwhile, JOHNSTON having become completely satisfied that Goldsboro was the real object, hastily called in Hardee and moved from Smithfield down the road to Bentonville, where he intrenched himself, his line of works extending from Mills Creek on the upper side, and including the village, returned to the creek again.

This position the Fourteenth Corps in advance discovered. Gen. SLOCUM immediately formed a well chosen line, flanked upon the left by a ravine, where he posted the artillery, and upon the right by a swamp and open field.

The third battle is called the battle at Morris' Farm. From this admirable line, MORGAN's division having moved forward with the intention of establishing another line a half mile in advance, the enemy, who had been retiring toward their own line for several hours, here suddenly advanced with overwhelming numbers, and attacked the brigade of Gen. ROBINSON and Gen. BUELL, comprising MORGAN's division, and drove them back in some confusion to the line of the railroad, already marked by Gen. SLOCUM's prompt and skillful eye as the proper rallying ground for an emergency.

Here, by the exertions of our officers and the great bravery of the men, the enemy were checked. A hasty work of rails and dirt was thrown up, and the whole of the Fourteenth Corps, and Col. SELVIDGE's Brigade of the Twentieth Corps, and Gen. KILPATRICK's cavalry, arrived and took up a position, Col. SELVIDGE upon the left, the cavalry in the rear. This was at 4 o'clock P. M., and now began a series of desperate charges by the enemy, only equaled by those at Franklin, and mainly directed against the right by the diversion of the Georgians who had just before been flanked and doubled down to this line.

The enemy charged in three columns, one after another, each following up the other's repulse, making at one time three charges in thirty-five minutes, and with such desperation that when night closed in upon their defeat not only was the ground in our front strewn with their loss, but their dead were packed up in numbers within our lines, even around the headquarters of the Generals.

On the other hand our men fought as only this army can fight. Not a man left his post in line of battle, and each time the enemy was hurled back in confusion from in front of the very men whom overwhelming and outflanking numbers had only forced to retire in the morning.

The fighting in this engagement has been surpassed by no other during the war.

It was a grand spectacle as described to your correspondent by a general officer himself, from his position on the left, an eye-witness of the whole; the battle-field was in full view, and notwithstanding the confusion of a sudden attack with which the position had been taken, a better could not have been found.

Considering these facts, and that Gen. JOHNSTON commanded in person with a force of 40,000 men, outnumbering our troops, Maj.-Gen. SLOCUM, commanding, deserves great credit, and as he merits will, doubtless, receive the thanks of the nation.

The next morning, with all dispatch, starting at 3 o'clock A. M., the right was brought up from its camp in the neighborhood of Falling Church, and by night a position had been taken, directed by Gen. SHERMAN in person.

The Fifteenth and Seventeenth Corps, upon the right, and KILPATRICK's cavalry upon the extreme left, reached to Mill Creek, and were ready to take the offensive.

Tuesday was spent in intrenching, with the skirmishing attendant upon feeling the enemy in column, and when night came down, HOWARD's guns, far upon the extreme right, could still be heard long after dark. Late in the evening the programme for the following day reached the rear, which was for an advance, to be covered in the rear by the cavalry and a brigade of infantry.

This amounted to a flank movement, the virtue of which was apparent when in the morning the enemy were found to be retiring without a skirmish to Smithfield, leaving SHERMAN's progress to his base unopposed. The order of approach to Goldsboro was then that the left wing, the Fourteenth Corps in advance, followed by the Twentieth, the troops that had borne the battle, should pass through the right wing, and cross the river first.

I found the train of the Twentieth already near the bridge, which was completed for passing fifteen minutes after my arrival at the river. A deserter who came in on Tuesday told Col. SELVIDGE, in my hearing, that two divisions from LEE's Richmond army arrived the night before. This report, though seemingly probable, I understand SHERMAN considered doubtful.

All day Wednesday, till midnight, I straddled a jaded horse to Kinston. The railroad bridge constructing at the river was to be crossed with a train toward Goldsboro in the morning. The construction men were on Saturday under orders to repair the Wilmington Road, and by this time, probably, both roads are in operation to Goldsboro, pouring in needed rations and supplies to the ragged and shoeless, but perfectly undaunted and now jubilant army of SHERMAN.

In fact, I doubt if any army in the field is now half so happy as that which over two months ago, with only fifteen days' rations, set out into a hostile wilderness, with no other guide than their crafty old Tycoon's carefully hidden pocket-compass. Unheard of obstacles have been encountered and overcome without detriment to a speed hitherto unequaled upon any march of similar length and difficulty.

No land in the world is less favorable to a forced march than that which has been traversed by SHERMAN's noble army. The rains of Winter and Spring caught by the clay underlying the land, forms one vast and horrible quagmire, utterly impassable except in the way the marvel was accomplished, by almost one entire bridge from Savannah to the present base, over felled, trampled forests. Col. JOEL, Quartermaster of the Seventeenth Corps, told me that from Fayetteville not less than thirty out of fifty miles had been corduroyed, and yet without retarding the miraculous rate of progress more than two miles a day.

Your correspondent crossed from SCHOFIELD with one of his staff and cavalry escort, starting on Sunday, the 19th, and deploying and camping within seven miles of Kenansville, reached the field on the night of the 20th. Nothing could equal our sensations as we galloped down the startled country's side to the muffled music of distant artillery, and as we approached, far and wide by the smoke of blazing forests, could be traced across the skies the black path of the terrible avenger, SHERMAN.

When night closed in and we rode amid the roar of foot and horse that still choked the ways, and the gleam and din of the myriad smoking camp-fires, round which ranged the grim and war-worn veterans of this noble army, words altogether fail to depict the passion of the scene.

Further Facts Concerning Sherman's Recent Movement—The Battle at Bentonville—Schofield Joins Sherman—Supplies Arriving at Morehead City—Rebel Prisoners Sent to Newbern—Reinforcements for Sherman.

NEWBERN, N. C., Friday, March 24.

On Sunday last the Twentieth Corps of Gen. SHERMAN's army met the enemy at Bentonville, instead of Mount Olive, as at first reported, twenty-six miles southwest of Goldsboro, where our advance was checked until the arrival of the Fourteenth Corps, which held the enemy at bay, when the Seventeenth Corps arrived and flanked the enemy, who left in confusion for Raleigh. SHERMAN's forces entering Smithfield, which is half way between Raleigh and Goldsboro.

The citizens of Goldsboro gave our troops a hearty welcome.

The enemy captured three of our guns and a few prisoners on the first day, but on the arrival of the Seventeenth and Fourteenth Corps, the rebels were driven in all directions, leaving the three guns captured from us, and seven additional ones, in our hands, besides seven thousand prisoners and their killed and wounded. Deserters are coming into SHERMAN's lines in great numbers, who confess that they were badly whipped.

SHERMAN, with the junction of TERRY and SCHOFIELD, is now very strong, and will sweep everything before him.

SHERMAN's wagon train has arrived at Kinston for supplies. He will refit his army, after which he will be ready to move again. The delight of our troops in meeting each other in victory is beyond description. Goldsboro will undoubtedly be the base until all is in readiness for the new move.

It is reported that 20,000 of SHERMAN's men were without shoes on reaching GOLDSBORO. Supplies of all kinds have gone forward.

LATER.

SHERMAN's wounded in the battle at Bentonville will be brought to Newbern.

A large amount of cotton and other property has been captured by our forces. The enemy burnt one thousand bales in Goldsboro just before we took possession. The people along the route greeted the old flag with joy.

MOREHEAD CITY, Saturday, March 25.

Quartermaster-General M. C. MEIGS and Staff arrived here this morning from Washington.

Vessels with supplies are rapidly arriving, which are being sent to the front by rail. Capt. AUSTIN is in charge of both railroad and transportation trains. He is extending the wharf and making many other improvements.

Many of the mules brought here on steamers died on the passage for the want of water, and one steamer which sailed with 360 lost 90.

All vessels drawing less than nine feet should be sent direct to Newbern, as the railroad facilities are very limited. The trains will go through to-day to Goldboro.

The prisoners captured by SHERMAN are arriving at Newbern. Five hundred arrived there last night, and two thousand reached Kinston at the same time. The rest will be forwarded as fast as possible.

Reinforcements for SHERMAN are constantly arriving.

Deserters and refugees continue to come in in great numbers.

Our troops will, doubtless, take a few days' rest. Gen. SHERMAN may make a brief visit to Gen. GRANT.

NEWS FROM THE SOUTH.

Gen. Hood's Report of the Operations of the Army of the Tennessee—His Apologies for Failure and Defence of His Conduct.

We have, in the Richmond Enquirer of the 25th, the complete report of Gen. HOOD during the time he commanded in the Southwest. We copy the more interesting portions, omitting that which is merely a narrative of the movements of his forces:

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 15, 1865.

Gen. S. Cooper, Adjutant and Inspector-General, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following report of the operations of the Army of Tennessee while commanded by me, from July 18, 1864, to Jan. 23, 1865:

The results of a campaign do not always show how the General in command has discharged his duty. The inquiry should be not what he has done, but what he should have accomplished with the means under his control.

THE ARMY BEFORE HOOD TOOK IT.

To appreciate the operations of the Army of Tennessee it is necessary to look at its history during the three months which preceded the day on which I was ordered to its command. To do this it is necessary either to state in this report all the facts which illustrate the entire operations of the Army of Tennessee in the recent campaign, or to write a supplemental or accompanying report. I deem the former more appropriate, and will, therefore, submit in a single paper all the information which seems to me should be communicated to the Government.

On the 6th of May, 1864, the army lay at and near Dalton, awaiting the advance of the enemy. Never had so large a Confederate army been assembled in the West. Seventy thousand (70,000) effective men were within the easy direction of a single Commander, whose good fortune it was to be able to give successful battle and redeem the losses of the past. Extraordinary efforts had been used to secure easy victory. The South had been denuded of troops to fill the strength of the Army of Tennessee. Mississippi and Alabama were without military support, and looked for protection in decisive battle in the mountains of Georgia. The vast forces of the enemy were accumulating in the East, and, to retard their advance or confuse their plans, much was expected by a counter movement by us in the West. The desires of the Government, expressed to the Confederate Commander in the West, were to assume the offensive. Nearly all the men and resources of the West and South were placed at his disposal for the purpose. The men amounted to the number already stated, and the resources for their support were equal to the demand. The reinforcements were within supporting distance. The troops felt strong in their increased numbers, saw the means and arrangements to move forward, and recover, not abandon, our own territory, and believed that victory might be achieved. In such condition was that splendid army when the active campaign fairly opened. The enemy, but little superior in numbers, none in organization and discipline, inferior in spirit and confidence, commenced his advance. The Confederate forces, whose faces and hopes were to the North, almost simultaneously commenced to retreat. They soon reached positions favorable for resistance. Great ranges of mountains running across the line of march, and deep rivers, are stands from which a well-directed army is not easily driven or turned. At each advance of the enemy, the Confederate army, without serious resistance, fell back to the next range or river in the rear. This habit to retreat soon became a routine of the army, and was substituted for the hope and confidence with which the campaign opened. The enemy soon perceived this. With perfect security, he divided his forces, using one column to menace in front, and one to threaten in rear. The usual order to retreat, not strike in detail, was issued and obeyed. These retreats were always at night. The day was consumed in hard labor. Daily temporary works were thrown up, behind which it was never intended to fight. The men became travelers by night and laborers by day. They were ceasing to be soldiers by the disuse of military duty. Thus for seventy-four (74) days and nights that noble army, which, if ordered to resist, no force that the enemy could assemble could dislodge from a battle-field, continued to abandon their country, to see their strength departing, and their flag waving only in retreat or in partial engagements. At the end of that time, after descending from the mountains, when the last advantage of position was abandoned, and camping, without fortifications, on the open plains of Georgia, the army had lost twenty two thousand seven hundred and fifty (22,750) of its best soldiers. Nearly one-third was gone, no general battle fought, much of our State abandoned, two others uncovered and the organization and efficiency of every command, by loss of officers, men and tone seriously diminished. These things were the inevitable result of the strategy adopted. It is impossible for a large army to retreat in the face of a pursuing enemy without such a fate. In a retreat the losses are constant and permanent. Stragglers are overtaken, the fatigued fall by the wayside and are gathered up by the advancing enemy. Every position by the rear guard, if taken, yields its wounded to the victors. The soldiers, always awakened from rest at night to continue the retreat, leave many of their comrades asleep in trenches. This is the time for desertion. The losses of a single day are not large. Those of seventy-four (74) days will embrace the strength of an army. If a battle is to be fought and the field held at the close, however great the slaughter, the loss will be less than to retreat in the face of an enemy. There will be no stragglers. Desertions are in retreat; rarely, if ever, on the field of battle. The wounded are gathered to the rear and soon recover, and in a few weeks the entire loss consists only of the killed and permanently disabled, which is not one-fifth of the apparent loss on the night of the battle. The enemy is checked, his plans deranged, territory saved, the campaign suspended or won. If retreat still be necessary, it can then be done with no enemy pressing and no loss following. The advancing party loses nothing but its killed and permanently disabled. Neither straggler nor deserter thin its ranks. It reaches the end of its march stronger for battle than when it started. The army commanded by Gen. SHERMAN and that commanded by Gen. JOHNSTON, not greatly unequal to the commencement of the campaign, illustrate what I have written. Gen. SHERMAN, in his official report, states that his forces, when they entered Atlanta, were nearly the same in number as when they left Dalton. The Army of Tennessee lost twenty-two thousand seven hundred and fifty (22,750) men, nearly one-third of its strength. I have nothing to say of the statement of losses made by Gen. JOHNSTON in his official report, except to state that by his own figures he understates his losses some thousands, that he excludes the idea of any prisoners, although his previous official returns show more than seven thousand (7,000) under the head of "absent without leave;" and that the returns of the army while he was in command, corrected and increased by the records of the army which has not been fully reported to the Government, and the return signed by me, but made up under him, as soon as I assumed command, show the losses of the Army of Tennessee to be what I have stated; and a careful examination of the returns with the army will show the losses to be more than stated.

THE MEANS HE HAD TO RETRIEVE DISASTER.

This statement of the previous conduct of the campaign is necessary, so as to show what means I had to retrieve the disasters of the past. And if the results are not such as to bring joy to the country, it is not the first time that the most faithful efforts of duty were unable to repair the injury done by others. If, as is untruly charged, the Army of Tennessee ceased to exist under my command, it is also true that it received its mortal wound when it turned its back in retreat in the mountains in Georgia; and, under different management, it lingered much longer than it would have done with the same daily loss occurring, when it was placed under my direction.

The army was turned over to me, by order of the President, at Atlanta, on the 18th July, 1864. Its effective strength was: infantry, thirty-three thousand seven hundred and fifty, (33,750;) artillery, three thousand and five hundred, (3,500;) cavalry, ten thousand, (10,000;) with one thousand five hundred Georgia militia, commanded by Maj.-Gen. G. W. SMITH, making a total effective of forty-eight thousand seven hundred and fifty (48,750) men. The army was in bivouac south of the Chattahoochie River, between Atlanta and that river. The Federal Army had crossed the river and was advancing, the right near Pace's Ferry, and the left near Roswell.

[Gen. HOOD here goes into a full history of movements down to the time he had got the main portion of his men back to Columbus, Miss., after their disastrous defeat by THOMAS in front of Nashville. He then says:]

HOOD ASKS TO BE RELIEVED.

Here, finding so much dissatisfaction throughout the country, as in my judgment to greatly impair, if not destroy, my usefulness and counteract my exertions, and with no desire but to serve my country, I asked to be relieved, with the hope that another might be assigned to the command who might do more than I could hope to accomplish. Accordingly, I was so relieved on the 23d January, by authority of the President.

HE DEFENDS HIMSELF AGAINST JOHNSTON.

And now, lest an opportunity should not be again presented, I trust I may be pardoned for noticing, in self-defence, one or two statements in Gen. JOHNSTON's report of two previous operations of this army, which has just been given to the public, in which the action of Lieut. Gen. POLK and myself has been impugned. I thoroughly understand that it is not the part of an officer to state what may have occurred from time to time in council, but a charge publicly made certainly ought to be publicly met. In Gen. JOHNSTON's report he says: "On the morning of the 19th (May,) when half of the Federal army was near Kingston, the two corps at Cassville were ordered to advance against the troops that had followed them from Adairsville, HOOD leading on the right. When this corps had advanced some two miles, one of his staff officers reported to Lieut.-Gen. HOOD that the enemy was approaching on the Canton Road, in rear of the right of our original position. He drew back his troops and formed them across the road. When it was discovered that the officer was mistaken, the opportunity had passed by the near approach of the Federal army. Expecting to be attacked, I drew up my troops in what seemed to me an excellent position—a bold ridge immediately in rear of Cassville, with an open valley before it. The fire of the enemy's artillery commenced soon after the troops were formed, and continued until night. Soon after dark Lieut.-Gens. POLK and HOOD, together, expressed to me decidedly the opinion, formed upon the observation of the afternoon, that the Federal artillery would render their positions untenable the next day, and urged me to abandon the ground immediately and cross the Etowah. Lieut.-Gen. HARDEE, whose position I thought weakest, was confident that he could hold it. The other two officers, however, were so earnest and so unwilling to depend upon the ability of their corps to defend the ground, that I yielded, and the army crossed the Etowah on the 28th—a step which I have regretted ever since." For myself, and the good and great man, now deceased, with whom I am associated in this stricture, I offer a statement of the facts in reply: After the army had arrived at Cassville, I proposed to Gen. JOHNSTON, in the presence of Gens. HARDEE and POLK, to move back upon the enemy, and attack him at or near Adairsville, urging as a reason, that our three corps could move back, each upon a separate road, while the enemy had but one main road upon which he could approach that place. No conclusion was obtained. While Gens. POLK and HARDEE and myself were riding from Gen. JOHNSTON's headquarters, the matter was further discussed, Gen. POLK enthusiastically advocating, and Gen. HARDEE also favoring the proposition. It was then suggested that we should return and still further urge the matter upon Gen. JOHNSTON. We, however, concluded to delay until the morning. The next morning, while we were all assembled at Gen. JOHNSTON's headquarters, it was reported that the enemy was driving in the cavalry on the Adairsville road, in front of POLK's position. POLK's corps was in line of battle and my corps was in bivouac on his right. We all rode to the right of POLK's line in front of my bivouac. HARDEE soon left and went to his position, which was on the left, there being some report of the enemy being in that direction. Gen. JOHNSTON said to me, "You can, if you desire, move with your corps to the Ironton road, and if HOWARD's corps is there you can attack it." My troops were put in motion. At the head of the column, I moved over to this road and found it in possession of our own dismounted cavalry, and no enemy there. While in motion, a body of the enemy, which I supposed to be cavalry, made its appearance on the Canton road in rear of the right of my original position. Major-Gen. HINDMAN was then in that direction with his division, to ascertain what force it was, keeping the other two divisions in the vicinity of the Ironton road. It was no mistake, as Gen. JOHNSTON states, that the force appeared, as is shown from the fact that Maj.-Gen. HINDMAN had men wounded from the small arms and artillery fired from this body. Maj. JAMES HAMILTON, of my staff, was sent to report to Gen. JOHNSTON the fact that the enemy had appeared on the Canton road. During Maj. HAMILTON's absence, Brig.-Gen. MACKALL, Chief of Staff, rode up in great haste, and said that Gen. JOHNSTON directed that I should not separate myself too far from Gen. POLK. I called his attention to where Gen. POLK's right was resting, and informed him that I could easily form upon it, and orders were given to that effect, throwing back my right to look after this body, which turned out to be the enemy's cavalry. Finding that I had done all which Gen. JOHNSTON had given me liberty to do, I then rode to his headquarters, where Gen. JOHNSTON decided to take up his line on the ridge in rear of the one then occupied by Gen. POLK—a line which was enfiladed by heights of which the enemy would at once possess himself, as was pointed out to Gen. JOHNSTON by Brig.-Gen. SHOUP, commanding the artillery. In a very short time thereafter, the enemy placed his artillery on these heights, and began to enfilade Gen. POLK's line. Observing the effect upon the troops of this fire, I was convinced that the position was unsuited for defence. Accordingly, Gen. POLK and myself said to Gen. JOHNSTON that our positions would prove untenable for defence, but that we were in as good position to advance upon the enemy as could be desired. We told him that if he did not intend to take the offensive he had better change our position. He accordingly ordered the army to cross the Etowah. It will thus be seen that I received no order to give battle, and I believe that had Gen. POLK received such an order he would have mentioned it to me. Were Gen. POLK now alive he would be astounded at the accusation made against him. Again: Gen. JOHNSTON says that "the usual skirmishing was kept up on the 28th, (May.) Lieut.-Gen. HOOD was instructed to put his corps in position during the night, to attack the enemy's left flank at dawn the next morning, the rest of the army to join in the action successively from right to left. On the 29th (May) Lieut.-Gen. HOOD, finding the Federal left covered by a division which had intrenched itself in the night, thought it inexpedient to attack, so reported and asked for instructions. As the resulting delay made the attack inexpedient, even if it had not been so before, by preventing surprise, upon which success in a great measure depended, he was recalled."

The enemy, on the 28th, had extended his left flank across Alatoona Creek, and along the Ackworth Road. At my own suggestion, Gen. JOHNSTON directed me to move with my corps and strike the enemy's left. Upon arriving the next morning, and while moving to accomplish this, I found that the enemy had retired his flank a mile, and had strongly fortified it. The opportunity having thus passed by the act of the enemy, and not by my delay, I reported the fact to Gen. JOHNSTON, deeming it best that the attack should not be made, and the instructions to me were countermanded.

A SUMMARY OF THE WHOLE MATTER.

My operations are now fully stated. It may not be improper to close with a general resume of the salient points presented. I was placed in command under the most trying circumstances which can surround an officer when assigned to a new and most important command. The army was enfeebled in number and in spirit by long retreat, and by severe and apparently fruitless losses. In my front was an enemy fully equipped, strong, arrogant, and flushed with victory. The Army of Tennessee, between the 13th and 20th of May, two months before, numbered seventy thousand (70,000) effective, arms-bearing men, as the official records show. It was at that time in most excellent condition and in full hope. It had dwindled day by day in partial engagements and skirmishes, without an action that could be properly called a battle, to forty-seven thousand two hundred and fifty, (47,250,) exclusive of one thousand five hundred militia, which joined in the interim. What, with this immense loss and the constant digging and retreating from Dalton to Atlanta, the spirit of the army was greatly impaired, and hope had almost left it. With this army I immediately engaged the enemy, and the tone constantly improved and hope returned. I defended Atlanta, a place without natural advantages, or rather with all advantages in favor of the enemy, for forty-three (43) days. No point, of all passed over from Dalton down, was less susceptible of defence by nature. Every preparation was made for retreat. The army lay in bivouac a short distance from the town, without attempting to construct works of defence in front of the camps, ready to resume the line of march as soon as the enemy pressed forward. I venture the statement that there was neither soldier nor officer in that army who believed that in the open plain between Atlanta and the river a battle would be offered, which had so often been refused in strong positions on the mountains. My first care was to make an intrenched line, and the enemy, despairing of success in front, threw his army to the left and rear, a thing he never could have done had it not been for the immense advantage the Chattahoochie river gave him. I arrived at Lovejoy's Station, having fought four battles, and the official returns of the army on the 20th September, show an effective total of forty thousand four hundred and three (40,403) present, thus giving a total loss in all this time of five thousand two hundred and forty-seven (5,247) men.

My reasons for undertaking the movement into Tennessee have, I think, been sufficiently stated. Had I not made that movement, I am fully persuaded that SHERMAN would have been upon Gen. LEE's communications in October, instead of at this time.

From Palmetto to Spring Hill the campaign was all that I could have desired. The fruits ought to have been gathered at that point. At Nashville, had it not have been for an unfortunate event, which could not justly have been anticipated, I think we would have gained a complete victory. At any time it was in the power of the army to retire from Tennessee in event of failure, as is established by the leisurely retreat, which was made under the most difficult and embarrassing circumstances. It is my firm conviction that, notwithstanding that disaster, I left the army in better spirits, and with more confidence in itself, than it had at the opening of the campaign. The official records will show that my losses, including prisoners, during the entire campaign, do not exceed ten thousand (10,000) men. Were I again placed in similar circumstances, I should make the same marches and fight the same battles, trusting that the same unforeseen and unavoidable accidents would not again recur to change into disaster a victory which had been already won.

In support of the statements touching the strength and losses of the army, I respectfully refer to the official records kept by the Assistant Adjutant General, (Major KINLOCH FALCONER,) alike on duty with Gen. JOHNSTON and myself.

Those who have seen much service in the field during this war will at once understand why it was that desertion, which had been so frequent on the retreat from Dalton to Atlanta, almost entirely ceased as the army assumed the offensive and took a step forward. I did not know of a desertion on the march from Palmetto to Dalton, or from Dalton to Florence. I am informed that the Provost-Marshal-General of the Army of Tennessee reports less than three hundred (300) desertions during the whole Tennessee campaign. The Tennessee troops entered the State with high hopes as they approached their homes. When the fortunes of war was against us, the same faithful soldiers remained true to their flag, and, with rare exceptions, followed it in retreat as they had borne it in advance.

Respectfully yours, J. B. HOOD, General.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

RECKLESS STREET RAILROADING.—Yesterday, at 11:15 A. M., the driver of car No. 27 of the Fourth-avenue Railroad, (the conductor's badge being marked three,) drove at full trot, without calling out, reining up or using brakes, and with every appearance of intentional collision, into a private carriage, in Fourth-avenue, just at the corner of Fourteenth-street. The carriage was, of course, violently jerked to one side, and a little child in it only saved from falling under the wheels of both car and carriage, by the grasp of a lady in the back seat. It is a wonder that the horse did not run away. Having done this, the driver of the car instantly drove on faster than ever. The conductor, when spoken to, answered civilly enough, but with a statement that makes the Railroad Company look sufficiently reckless of life. He said, "I have cautioned him for such conduct two or three times before!" It appears, therefore, that such reckless brutalities, at most, elicit a "caution." But why should not our street roads have their part in the carnival of railroad murders?

ATTEMPT TO COMMIT SUICIDE IN THE TOMBS.—WILLIAM JONES alias "Jack Sheppard," who is under indictment for burglary, attempted to commit suicide yesterday morning at the Tombs, by severing an artery of his left arm with a common pocket-knife. When found by the keepers, the prisoner was lying on his bed and nearly exhausted from hemorrhage. His wound was dressed by Dr. SIMMONS, the Tombs Surgeon, but it is thought that he may open the artery afresh, as he had resolved to commit suicide rather than serve a term in State Prison. He says that, having served in the army, he is willing to enlist in either army or navy, but that he will not go to Sing Sing. In other words, he threatens the Court of General Sessions. His relatives are worthy citizens.

LARGE SALE OF CARRIAGES.—Messrs. WOOD BROTHERS, the well known carriage manufacturers, will dispose of their entire stock by public auction on Wednesday and Thursday evenings next, at their repository in Fourth-street near the Sixth-avenue. (Palace Garden.) The stock contains nearly one hundred and fifty carriages, many of them of the most fashionable styles, and made expressly for this market. The clarences, coupés and phaetons are particularly worthy of attention, being finished in the most costly and recherché manner. Immediately after the sale, the firm will resume business at its old stand No. 596 Broadway with a large and entirely new stock.

CLOSING OF THE COIN SALE.—The sale of rare coins by LEAVITT & Co., which commenced last week, has closed. The number of pieces sold was nearly 4,000, realizing about $15,000. Among the coins which sold for high prices on the last day, were the following: Six season medals, issued during the second Presidency of WASHINGTON, $800; three Washington half-dollars of 1792, $140, $100 and $85 respectively; Washington copper of 1792, $80; Washington silver medal, $110; Washington cent of 1792, naked bust, $400; Washington funeral medal, $65; Washington medal, (bust,) in silver, $105.

ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE AND ART.—The inaugural ceremonies of the New-York Association for the Advancement of Science and Art, will be held this evening in the Great Hall of the Cooper Institute. Among the speakers named, are Judge Daly, Mr. Greeley, Dr. Griscom, Prof. Doremus, Mr. Bryant, Mr. S. S. Randall, Mr. L. Sherwood, Prof. Gale, and Mr. J. B. Varnum.

PROF. BENJAMIN'S CONCERT.—A concert in aid of the funds of the Fiftieth-street Presbyterian Church took place last evening, at the hall corner of Broadway and Fortieth-street, under the direction of Prof. BENJAMIN. The programme was attractive. Another concert will be given this evening.

The Singer Divorce Suit—The Opinion of the Court on the Motion made to Reopen the Case.

The following is the opinion given by Judge LEONARD in refusing leave for the defendant to reopen the decree of divorce granted several years ago:

The lapse of time since the judgment was entered creates an insuperable objection to opening it. The defendant insists that the judgment was obtained by collusion, but does not state directly whether she means collusion between the parties to the action or between her attorney and the plaintiff and his attorney or advisers. If she was a party to the collusion charged she is not entitled to any consideration. It was not she, but the court who were defrauded, if that was the case, and she ought not to have the benefit of the suggestion of her own fraud. But I am inclined to think that Mrs. Singer means that she was the victim of a collusion between her attorney and the plaintiff and his friends and advisers. These parties fully exculpate themselves by a denial of her charge except in the case of Mr. Clark, who is absent from the country. Her own attorney is, by his character, above the reproach which she seeks to cast upon him. I think Mrs. Singer must have known nearly all the material facts now set up at the time she consented to allow the decree to be taken. About the only fraud she complains of is that her husband was a richer man than he was represented to be, and able to have paid her a larger sum than she consented to receive. There is another important consideration. There are innocent third parties who would be most injuriously affected by disturbing the decree. The motion is denied.

Criminal Business.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Judge Russel.

George W. Blunt, a contraband of the deepest dye, pleaded guilty yesterday to an attempt at grand larceny in stealing a silver watch. The prisoner stated that he found the watch and did not know to whom it belonged. He was sent to the Penitentiary for one year. James Sheridan, a lad only 13 years old, pleaded guilty to arson in the fourth degree, having set fire to a barn in the upper part of the city. In sentencing him his Honor stated that the boy had been once before confined in the Juvenile Asylum, and had attempted to set fire to that institution. He should be obliged to send him to the Penitentiary for three years.

Eliza Fiess was tried for grand larceny.

Mrs. Anthony, the complainant, testified that on the 25th of January last she lost her pocket-book in an Eighth-avenue car. After she discovered her loss she went back and found the conductor, who told her that a young girl had picked it up in the car but refused to deliver it up, stating that she expected to get a reward for it. The girl gave her name as Elizabeth Augusta Smith and stated that she lived at No. 554 Tenth-avenue, but Mrs. Anthony was never able to find her there.

Susan Jane Van Tassel, testified, that she was with the prisoner when she picked up the pocket-book; the conductor asked her for it but she would not give it up; prisoner and the witness then went to Van-Amburgh's, where they counted the money.

William Percival testified, that he was a conductor on the Eighth-avenue Railroad; on the 25th of January last he saw the prisoner pick up a pocket-book that had been dropped on the floor of the car; witness urged the prisoner to give him the pocketbook, stating that it was his duty to take care of all property found in the cars; but the girl refused to let him have it, as she had once before found some money in the car, and had received a reward for returning it. The pocket-book contained $270.

The jury found her guilty, and recommended her to the mercy of the court. Remanded for sentence on Friday.

Michael J. Sarilis, George Corsen, James Gilligan, John J. Farrell, John Hanes, Michael Farrell, jointly indicted for arson, having been engaged in setting fire to the orphan asylum, under the promise that the boys shall be sent out of the city, they were discharged.

Edward Morris, charged with grand larceny, in taking $200 in money and jewelry from Mrs. Newman, was tried, the prisoner pleading his own case. There was a question of identity as to the prisoner and the thief between one of the witnesses for the prosecution and the prisoner. The jury found him guilty, and recommended him to the mercy of the court. The court sentenced him to the State Prison for two years, and adjourned until this morning at 11 o'clock.

CONSUMPTION—CONSUMPTION.—We say to persons having consumption, in whatever stage of the disease, use Dr. WISHART's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, which is readily taken up by the blood and carried to lungs, and the healing principles of the tar act upon the inflamed sores of the lungs and stop their decay at once, and the patient's life is saved. The Pine Tree Tar Cordial has great power to dissolve the thick mucous that stops up the wind-passages of the lungs, and expels it from the system. The Pine Tree Tar Cordial purifies the blood and cleanses it of all scrofulous matter that is constantly breeding sores, internal and external. Salt rheum, blotches on the face, and all skin diseases, are especially cured by Dr. WISHART's Pine Tree Tar Cordial. Office No. 10 North Second-street, Philadelphia. The united meetings of the IXth and XVth Wards having in each instance proved a perfect success, and the large hall having been crowded to such an extent as to prevent many from attending the meetings, it has been decided by the General Committee of both wards to hold separate meetings, for the purpose of devising ways and means for the relief of the conscripts who have been recently drafted, and to make arrangements for the establishment of a recruiting office in each ward.
